War Splits Tokyo.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Friday), April 15.—A serious crisis confronted the Japanese cabinet today, and there were rumors Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, unable to control warring factions, was preparing to resign.

The premier officially was silent, but reliable sources said the government was divided on the issue of mobilizing Japan's full military strength in an effort to achieve quick and complete victory in China.

This would entail promulgating the national mobilization law, giving the government wide powers in war time. The premier won passage of the law by assuring the people it would not be invoked during the present incident.

Reported Wounded.

Tokyo (Friday), April 15 (U.P.).—The Japanese foreign office announced today it had been informed reliably that China's Gen. Chiang Kai-shek was wounded in both legs during the bombing of Changsha by Japanese on April 10.

The same source reported that T. V. Soong, chairman of the board of the Bank of China and chairman of the newly reorganized Chinese Air force, was wounded in the stomach and right arm.

Townsend to Get Same Treatment As Other Inmates

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 71-year-old apostle of $200-a-month pensions for the "old folks," will be treated just like any other prisoner when he arrives at the District Jail, Capt. Thomas M. Rives, superintendent, said yesterday.

Townsend, sentenced to 30 days and a $100 fine for contempt of a House investigating committee, was scheduled to leave Los Angeles last night by plane. He expected to arrive here tomorrow.

If it is found he is fitted for some particular work, he will be assigned to it, Rives said.

Easter Visitors Crowd Capital In Heat of 84

The vanguard of Easter visitors began to crowd Washington yesterday as the sun lifted the temperature to 84 degrees for the hottest April 14 of the century.

Thousands of Washingtonians went to their churches to celebrate Maundy or Holy Thursday as churches prepared for Good Friday services today.

The sun which brought the temperature to a tie with 1896 for the hottest April 14 for 70-odd years also hastened blossoming of the double cherry blossoms about the Speedway. They will be at peak Sunday.

D. C. Business Tax Approval Slated Today

Senate Committee Due To Report Law With More 'Teeth.'

New Bill Provides for Graduated Rate on Gross Receipts.

By James D. Secrest.

A business privilege tax, which though modified in some respects will have more teeth in it than the present law, will be approved by the Senate District Committee today, it was indicated yesterday.

Tentative approval of a preliminary draft submitted by the District Commissioners was given by Chairman King (Democrat), of Utah, and other committee members yesterday.

Hope to Raise $2,000,000.

The new tax, while carrying a graduated rate in place of the present flat two-fifths of one per cent on gross receipts, is designed to more than make up for the possible loss by eliminating the present credit allowed for payment of tangible personal property taxes.

The Commissioners, while avoiding an outright estimate of the possible yield in view of the disastrous guess on the present law, hope to raise $2,000,000 instead of a bare $1,200,000, which would be sufficient to balance the present District budget for the next fiscal year.

This would restore the revenue potentialities of the bill to the total of $5,200,000 anticipated before the House struck out the income tax. The latter levy was expected to yield a net return of $2,000,000.

Will Await Relief Quiz.

Officials at the District Building, it was said, are anticipating a substantial increase in the appropriation for unemployment relief and want to be prepared for it. One official said he believed the deficiency appropriation for relief early next session may amount to $1,000,000.

The amount will not be determined, however, until after the completion of the special relief in-

Must Study Plan For Lasting C.I.O., Avers Dubinsky

New York, April 14 (AP).—David Dubinsky, leader of the powerful International Ladies Garment Workers Union, today said his group would discuss thoroughly the action of the C. I. O. to form a permament organization.

Dubinsky said he awaited a report from Julius Hochman, who attended the C. I. O. conference in Washington. Hochman did not take part in the voting for a permanent C. I. O. union.

"Why should I worry?" he said. "They (the C. I. O.) can't hold their convention until September or October. We have plenty of time."

Dubinsky said the subject would be discussed at the executive board's regular meeting the third week in May. He said he had not been asked by John L. Lewis to accept the position of chairman of the C. I. O. Housing Committee, as announced at the conference.

Congress Gets $4,512,000,000 Plan; Treasury Frees Gold to Aid Credit

New Deal Chiefs Move to Pool All Recovery Plans in 1 Bill.

Message Arouses Stormy Reaction

Conservative Democrats Join Republicans in Attack on 'Priming.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Through a mixed tumult of praise and condemnation, Congressional leaders moved last night to pool President Roosevelt's spending-lending recovery proposals into a single, omnibus appropriation bill in an effort to drive them to early passage.

Relief features of the program escaped immediate fire, but conservative Democrats joined Republicans in assailing any plan to "prime a pump that is dry." They were all but drowned out by adulation on the Administration front and leadership predictions that the program will "restore confidence" and facilitate recovery.

Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee said closed hearings probably will open before his group on Wednesday.

Hearings Promised.

"We hope we can include all of the President's proposals in one bill," said Taylor. "There will be adequate hearings. I see no especial rush about it, and the committee probably will want explanations of the various provisions from officials most familiar with them."

Pooled consideration of the program faced one serious obstacle. Legislation cannot normally be included in an appropriation bill. Mr. Roosevelt's program involves changes in the housing act, and some other legislation. To include these features, the Appropriations Committee must get a special rule, or risk elimination of some provisions on points of order.

Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules committee is one of the leading opponents of "pump priming" and his committee may withhold a rule. In that event, some leaders indicated the bill will be carried to the floor anyway, and deleted portions restored in the Senate.

O'Connor Leads Attack.

O'Connor was one of the first yesterday to spring to attack the program. He said, "Priming the pump won't do any good if there's no water in the well," and suggested there are other more appropriate means of restoring confidence. Then he left the Capitol on a week's vacation.

In the Senate, Chairman Carter Glass of the Senate Appropriations Committee declared "nobody ever has been able to convince me that any nation can spend its way back to prosperity." The Virginian said he had hoped passage of his bill making $1,500,000,000 in RFC funds available for loans to industry and States, cities and counties, would

Babson Declares Coalition Can Win Election in 1940

Savannah, Ga., April 14 (AP).—Predicting "coalition or chaos" in 1940, Roger Babson, statistician and economist, named today six Democratic leaders, anyone of whom, he believes, might be nominated and elected president by a coalition of conservative Democrats and Republicans.

They were Senators Bailey (N. C.), George (Ga), Clark (Mo.), Byrd (Va.), Harrison (Miss.), and Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

'Not-Guilty' Plea Made by Landis

James L. Landis, 23-year-old former rookie fireman, yesterday pleaded not guilty to an indictment for the murder of his wife, Blanche, with a stocking filled with sand and gravel, that he beat her with a stone (a bloody stone was found near the body) and that he beat her with a blunt instrument.

History-Making Day in Brief

In one of President Roosevelt's busiest days and one of the most exciting days Washington has long experienced—reminiscent of the launching of the New Deal in 1933—these things, in rapid kaleidoscopic fashion, happened yesterday:

The President outlined to Congress a $4,512,000,000 spending program and called for expansion of credit through de-sterilization of the Treasury's inactive gold fund and reduction in deposit reserve requirements. (Page 14.)

Mr. Roosevelt in his first "fireside chat" in five months appealed for a "united national will" behind his recovery program as essential to the preservation of democracy. (Page 14.)

The Treasury de-sterilized $1,391,000,000 of inactive gold, immediately adding that sum to the excess reserve (idle money) of the Nation's banking system.

Federal reserve authorities prepared to reduce deposit reserve requirements by 12½ per cent, thus freeing another $750,000,000 for credit purposes.

First rejecting the Ramspeck compromise wage-hour bill, the House Labor Committee voted 14 to 4 to report a new measure stripped of all wage differentials and providing gradually rising floor under wages. (Page 2.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission refused, by a 6-to-5 vote, permission to Eastern railroads to increase their basic passenger coach rate from 2 to 2.5 cents a mile. (Page 9.)

The President warned aggressor nations North and South American republics would stand together to preserve the democracy and independence of the Western Hemisphere. (Page 9.)

The President also honored six campfire girls; received Herbert Morrison, British labor leader; had a one-hour interview with United Automobile Workers officials, vetoed a private claim bill and retired around midnight. He had arisen at 9 a. m., having worked until 2:45 a. m. Thursday on his message and speech.

Swift Stroke of Pen Wipes Out $1,391,000,000 'Inactive' Fund

Federal Reserve Governors Expected to Reduce Deposit Requirements Shortly; Theoretical Credit Expansion of 30 Billion Permitted.

Acting promptly on President Roosevelt's proposal for an expansion of the credit base of the Nation, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau late yesterday announced de-sterilization or freeing of the Treasury's entire hoard of inactive gold totaling $1,391,000,000.

By the scratch of a pen on a departmental order and several bookkeeping tabulations, the Treasury automatically wiped out its "inactive gold" fund, increased its general fund by $1,391,000,000 either for the retirement of outstanding short-term indebtedness or for payment of current expenses, and added that sum to the excess reserves, or idle money, of the banking structure.

$1,700,000,000 in Reserve.

Within a few days the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, acting under the President's proposal, is expected to reduce by 12½ per cent the deposit reserve requirements, thus adding another $750,000,000 to excess reserves.

With excess reserves yesterday at $1,700,000,000, they will reach the staggering and unprecedented total of approximately $3,800,000,000 when the Reserve Board takes its action. This amount of excess reserves theoretically would permit a credit expansion totaling approximately $30,000,000,000, or about $20,000,000,000 more than was possible yesterday.

Never before has such a gigantic reservoir of credit been made available to a nation at one time. The highest level to which excess reserves heretofore have risen was $3,300,000,000 in the summer of 1936, about the time the reserve board authorities first reduced the statutory deposit reserves by 50 per cent. The $1,700,000,000 of excess reserves yesterday was larger than at any time in the reserve system's history prior to the advent of the New Deal.

The effectiveness of excess reserves totaling $3,800,000,000 or more, though theoretically staggering to the imagination, according to experts, actually depends on the availability of borrowers and the willingness of banks to lend money. The fact that such sums now have been created and are available does not necessarily mean they will find their way into the channels of commerce,

Chicago Brokers Confess $400,000 Account Shortage

Chicago, April 14 (AP).—Assistant State's Attorney Nathan J. Kinnally said tonight three officers of Hoagland & Allum Co., Inc., New York and Chicago brokers, had admitted shortages in their accounts estimated at $400,000.

Kinnally quoted George Frederick Allum, 52, as saying he and his two associates hoped to recoup their fortunes within a few weeks through the sale of war supplies to China and European nations.

Allum, Olaf Andrew Larson, 46, and Henry Adolph Engel, 42, directors, were arrested.

President Calls for 'United National Will' to Combat Depression; Sees No Need for 'Fearful' Attitude.

White House Claims Only $1,712,000,000 of Vast Fund Won't Be Recoverable; Buying Power Held Too Low.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt last night called on the country to rally with "a united national will" to the support of the $4,512,000,000 spending program he had earlier laid before Congress—the New Deal's gigantic attack on the crushing new depression.

In his first radio fireside chat in five months the President said the Government would fight the depression with all its resources, with the preservation of democracy as the stakes in the struggle.

The building of a bulwark of economic security to protect American liberties he placed foremost in his program to prevent the "desperation" that drives men "to sacrifice liberty in the hope of getting something to eat."

Tone of Address Is Conciliatory.

The tone of his address was conciliatory, its substance not aggressive except in his demand that America's democratic institutions be maintained by meeting the Nation's problems "boldly."

The President fashioned the complicated program he sent to Congress so as to increase as little as possible the public debt, now at a record-breaking height of $37,559,959,996.

He ordered de-sterilization of the Treasury's frozen gold and reduction of the Federal Reserve Board's reserve requirements by about $750,000,000 in two directly inflationary moves.

Federal Reserve to Act Soon.

Within four hours after his message reached Congress, the Treasury had freed $1,182,974,522 of its sterilized gold and added to that $209,090,937 of "free gold" for a combined fund of $1,392,065,459 to be added to the credit resources of the Nation.

Action by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System was expected soon.

The White House offset the enormous spending program not only by freeing the $1,392,065,459 of unused Treasury gold but by making recoverable as much as possible of the $1,450,000,000 public works program.

The White House position, as outlined by Press Secretary Stephen T. Early, was that only $1,712,000,000 of the grand total of $4,512,000,000 would be nonrecoverable and would thus be added to the National debt.

President's View Isn't Gloomy.

The President did not take a gloomy view of the business situation in his message, but recognized the need for immediate, concerted action before worse follows. He said:

"It is because the course of our economics has run adversely for half a year that we owe it to ourselves to turn it in the other direction before the situation becomes more definitely serious."

The program he outlined was in three groups.

The first, calling for additional appropriations for the 1938-39 fiscal year, was directed toward stemming the drop in employment, and included:

Relief, $1,250,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration for the first Long-Hunted Crime 'Dictator' Shapiro Gives Self Up in N. Y.

Surrender of Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro, one of the Nation's most sought after and notorious underworld dictators, who, with his henchman, Louis Buchalter, ruled New York's multimillion-dollar illegal fur racket with bombs and dynamite and lead pipe, was announced last night by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The swarthy, flat-nosed racketeer, who was believed to have been the New York contact for such vicious criminals as the Barker-Karpis gang and Verne Miller, gave himself up in Manhattan.

He had been the object of a Nation-wide search since June 14, 1937, when he failed to appear as ordered while under bond of $10,000, after his conviction of violating the anti-trust laws.

On November 8, 1936, Shapiro was sentenced to serve two years and pay a $10,000 fine. He was released on $10,000 bail pending an appeal, which was denied. In June his bond was declared forfeited.

After he failed to appear in court and his bond was forfeited, Attorney General Homer Cummings authorized a reward of $2,500 for his arrest. Buchalter, who also failed to appear and is still at large, has a similar reward on his head.

With Buchalter, Shapiro operated the dreaded Fur Dressers Factor Corporation and Protective Fur Dressers' Corporation, and established a reign of terror in the great fur industry in New York.

They managed the business affairs for their clients, who were forced by threats and subsequent bombings, acid throwings and other violence, to join the organizations. Shapiro, Buchalter and 158 defendants were first indicted on November 6, 1933, and their cases dragged through the courts until conviction and the denial of appeal.

New Pay-Hour Bill Approved By House Unit

Differentials Are Dropped, Mrs. Norton's Proposal Passes Committee.

The House Labor Committee last night agreed 14 to 4 on a new wage-hour bill, stripped of all wage differentials and providing a gradually rising "floor" on wages.

Action was taken at an evening session, after the committee earlier in the day had rejected 10 to 8 the Ramspeck compromise, providing sectional differentials and a "weighted average" bottom on wages.

Chairman Mary T. Norton admitted she intentionally sought and attained action in advance of the President's "fireside chat" last night. She immediately telephoned to the White House, and later told reporters the President was "delighted."

The new bill would start wage regulation with a minimum of 25 cents an hour, which would gradually increase each year until a minimum of 40 cents was reached in three years. Over a two-year period, the maximum work-week would be shortened from 44 to 40 hours. The bill would be administered by the Secretary of Labor, with enforcement vested in the Justice Department.

The measure now must run the gauntlet of the hostile House Rules Committee. Reports were current last night that three of the four Republican members of the Rules Committee were considering switching their votes to approve the bill if the Labor Committee agreed on a measure fixing statutory wage-hour requirements. Such a shift, if it developed, would leave the Rules Committee tied 7 to 7.

Before the Labor Committee when it met yesterday was the compromise draft prepared by a subcommittee headed by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, carrying flexible provisions and permitting sectional differentials. This was rejected by a two-vote margin, with Mrs. Norton not voting.

Mrs. Norton's compromise draft, carrying more rigid provisions to appease labor demands, next was laid before the committee. By a vote of 12 to 6, differentials sought by the South were knocked out of the bill. The committee then recessed until the House adjourned for the day. Returning last night, the committee completed action of the Norton draft and voted approval.

Representative Ramspeck, wage-hour subcommittee chairman, will oppose the measure. By tightening provisions of the bill, Ramspeck said it had been made even more difficult of House passage.

Bill Would Curb Merit 'Pressure'

A bill, which would make it a misdemeanor for any member of Congress to indorse or recommend any applicant for a civil service position in the Federal government, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Barry (Democrat), of New York.

Barry said there was a false impression in the public mind that members of Congress could obtain preferred ratings for civil service applicants. His bill, he said, would protect the members from "unreasonable requests of their constituents" while at the same time protecting the civil service from political pressure.

Robert H. Alcorn, chairman of the joint committee on civil service retirement, said the Neely bill, as approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee, would cost the Federal government only about $600,000 a year, instead of $8,000,000, as reported in The Post Thursday. The latter figure, he said, was the estimate before amendments were adopted.

$800,000 Grant Asked For 2 Norfolk Projects

Representative Hamilton (Democrat), of Virginia, said yesterday the Budget Bureau had been asked to approve appropriation of $350,000 for a new trade school and $450,000 for a new mess hall at the Norfolk Naval Training Station.

This request, which he said had been submitted to Budget Bureau by the Navy Department, was in addition to the $600,000 carried in the pending appropriation bill for new barracks and mess hall at the Naval Air Station.

Less Noisy Trolleys One Goal Of Park View's Businessmen

M. C. SCHWARTZ.

Better Street Illumination and More Traffic Lights Also Sought by M. C. Schwartz, President of Georgia Avenue Group.

By Christine Sadler

Street cars that make less noise, better street lighting and more traffic lights are among the civic improvements for which the Park View Business Men's Association is working.

"The cars that come by here sound as if they were shaking the universe," declares M. C. Schwartz, president, who operates the Abbey Radio Service at 3547 Georgia avenue.

His association's territory extends along the avenue from Kenyon to Quincy and stretches from Eleventh to Warder. All the business houses, however, are concentrated along the street which the trolleys traverse.

The association was organized only a year and a half ago, and has 95 members. It has made application for membership in the Federation of Business Men's Associations.

Last Christmas, when just a year old, the group was able to put over a very effective Yule Tide Lane decoration idea. They will "follow through" again this year—although possibly not with the same idea.

Members of the association want a vote for the District and are on record as opposed to the business privilege tax.

"We feel that Congressmen and Senators are busy with their own states and cities, and that they are only at times interested in our local affairs," Schwartz says.

He is of the opinion that while the current agitation for the vote may have started because District leaders were dissatisfied with the financial relationship between local and Federal governments, it is now a "matter of principle."

"But we realize," he continues, "that the tax situation is one of the biggest District sore spots. We do not want the income tax any more than we want the business privilege tax."

Schwartz was born in New York, but came to Washington 29 years ago. He was one of the organizers of the Park View business group and is serving his second term as its only president. He has been in the wholesale radio service business for 12 years.

He is a Mason and his hobbies are fishing, golf and baseball. He has a wife and two children, and lives at 718 Shepherd street.

His association meets twice monthly at the City Bank on Georgia avenue and is planning a community excursion as one of its summer activities. The greatest good it has accomplished to date, in the opinion of its president, is a unification of community spirit.

"There is no doubt that we have stimulated business of our area and become recognized as a group interested in the whole civic development of our section," he says. "We have a well-balanced business community out here, but would like to see a good department store come in."

Other officers of the group are D. E. Nichols, first vice president; Jack Zoltrow, second vice president; William Cohn, financial secretary; William Ford, corresponding secretary, and Ted Lohmyer, treasurer.

On Monday—Bertram Wise, president of the Northern Seventh Avenue Business Men's Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Inquiry Today Over Receiving Home's Closing

A thorough investigation of the closing of the Children's Receiving Home and the National Training School for Girls, authorized in the 1939 District supply bill, will be started today by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, as chairman of a sub-committee of the Senate District Committee.

Public welfare officials of the District and Federal Governments have been invited to a hearing scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m. in the Senate Commerce Committee room.

Senator Copeland, while a member of the Senate sub-committee on appropriations that agreed to the closing of the Children's Receiving Home and the National Training School for Girls, said he was opposed to the House proposal and was absent when it was agreed to.

"It is unthinkable that the children from the Children's Receiving Home should be mixed up with adult criminals at the House of Detention," he said.

Copeland said his intention was to listen to various plans for improving the care of delinquent and homeless children and if any money is needed a deficiency appropriation may be requested.

The District Commissioners have asked the Budget Bureau for funds to erect temporary buildings at the Industrial School for Colored Boys at Blue Plains to house the colored inmates of the Girls' Training School.

No provision has been made for the children from the Receiving Home, however, since the fire marshal ruled that the old police court, where the House of Detention is to be moved, was unfit for the children.

Among the witnesses scheduled to be heard today are Elwood Street, public welfare director, and other officials of welfare department; Judge Fay Bentley, of Juvenile Court; Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Labor Department; the District Commissioners; Corporation Consel Elwood H. Seal, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, of the Voteless League of Women Voters.

The Gallup Poll

Proposed Conference to Outlaw Bombing of Civilians Has Wide Public Support.

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 14.—An international conference to outlaw the bombing of defenseless women and children during war, as proposed in a bill introduced in Congress by Representative E. C. Eicher, has the overwhelming approval of American voters reached in a Nation-wide survey. The majority believe the United States should take the lead in calling such a conference.

George Gallup.

Representative Eicher, of Iowa, proposed his bill after Secretary Hull had expressed the "sense of horror" of the American people over the air raids of Barcelona by Gen. Franco's forces March 17—a raid which was also severely criticized by the Pope. The bill calls for a meeting of world powers to re-examine and restate international law concerning the "murder of women and children in war" and to stigmatize the practice of bombing civilians "as being beyond the pale of even the most rudimentary civilization."

Public sentiment on this measure was sounded by the American Institute of Public Opinion in a survey in which the following two questions were asked:

(1) "Do you think all nations should agree not to bomb civilians in cities during wartime?"

Yes	91%
No	9

(2) "Should the United States call a conference of all nations to make such an agreement?"

Yes	61%
No	39

Public desire to see the United States thus cast in the role of humanitarian comes at a time when President Roosevelt is already seeking to alleviate the sufferings of Austrian and German refugees through a world committee.

The vote to have the United States take the lead in calling a conference on bombing is fairly uniform in all sections of the country. The range of approval is from 56 per cent in the East Central States to 68 per cent in the West Central area, as the following table shows:

Should U. S. Call Conference?

	Yes.	No.
New England	61%	39%
Middle Atlantic	58	42
East Central	56	44
West Central	68	32
South	65	35
Rocky Mountain	57	43
Pacific Coast	60	40

With the air raids in Spain and in China bringing particularly acute suffering to women and children, the women reached in the Institute survey are slightly more in favor of an international crusade against bombing than are the men. To the question of whether a world conference should be called, women voted 94 per cent "yes," men 89 per cent "yes."

On the question of whether the United States should take the lead in calling the conference the vote was: Men, 58 per cent "yes;" women, 65 per cent "yes."

FHA Applications Rise For 3-Month Period

During the first three months of the year there were 558 applications for mortgage insurance, totaling $3,184,000, filed with the Federal Housing Administration, it was announced yesterday. During the same period in 1937, 354 applications amounted to $2,087,400.

Applications for March virtually tripled the amount during the same month last year. The 344 applications totaled $2,007,300 last month. The 147 applications in March, 1937, amounted to $842,700.

Bill for Paying $5,000 to Hurt Child Is Vetoed

President Asserts Sum Is Not Commensurate With Damage.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a bill authorizing payment of $5,000 to Albert P. Alfonso, a small child of Woburn, Mass., for injuries in an accident involving a mail truck.

The President, returning the bill to the House, said the sum was too large. If the bill were drafted to allow an amount "more commensurate with the actual expense and injury sustained," he added, he would sign it gladly.

"Assuming that there was negligence on the part of the driver of the Government truck, which is questionable," the message said, "the payment of $5,000, in a case of this kind, where no loss of services is involved, must be predicated on the possibility that the injuries sustained by a 2-year-old child will result in a permanent impairment of health and earning power upon maturity.

"If, as may well happen, the injured child, now apparently recovered, though not in robust health, should in the course of a few years have arrived at a condition of normality, without more expense, the bill would constitute, in effect, a payment of the sum involved in this gratuity to the parents of three or four thousand dollars."

In a report on the bill, there was no positive evidence in its record that a postal truck struck the child, but that it "seems reasonable, however, as a presumption."

Mexican Silver Embargo Denied By Morgenthau

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday said the Treasury had not barred Mexican silver from sale in this country.

In effect, the only change made by the recent suspension of the Mexican silver agreement, he explained, was to eliminate the monthly 5,000,000-ounce quota, which gave Mexico advance assurance of how much silver it could sell the United States Treasury each month.

Policy Suspect Turned Loose; Proof Lacking

Turnage Frees Man Seized in Car With $608 in Pockets.

Washington's newly strengthened "numbers" law—permitting arrests on suspicion of a violation—suffered its first setback yesterday when United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage dismissed lottery charges against James Reed Porter, 32-year-old salesman, of 1420 I street northeast.

Turnage held that there was no direct proof that the accused man was writing numbers. Porter was arrested by Detective Sergeant George Deyoe, of the vice squad, in a parked car near First street and Florida avenue northeast.

On the seat by Porter, Deyoe testified, was a notebook containing figures and data. Deyoe contended the book was a record of numbers plays. A total of $608.54—mostly in change—was in Porter's pockets, the officer said.

"We can't break up this racket by doing things the wrong way," was the commissioner's only comment.

United States Attorney David A. Pine, commenting on the action of the commissioner, said that the decision was a wise one. He said his office was going to enforce the law "within the law."

At the same time he praised the police, saying:

"This is not to be construed as any reflection on the police department but simply a question of law—I applaud their zeal."

Porter's arrest followed a telephone "tip" to police that several men were taking numbers bets in the parked car. Three persons with Porter were not arrested.

At the same time yesterday, Turnage held another numbers suspect—a woman—in bail of $1,500 for a hearing next Thursday. The woman gave her name as Helen Ennie, and her occupation as a nurse. She was arrested in front of a building at 1907 Pennsylvania avenue.

Youth Linked To D.C. Assault, Bares Looting

Suspect Confesses 20 Robberies, Purse-Snatchings, Police Say.

A 16-year-old colored boy was held last night in connection with pocketbook snatchings and housebreakings since December.

The youth, arrested Wednesday by First Precinct detectives, yesterday admitted more than 20 crimes, according to Sergt. Larry O'Dea, of the robbery squad.

With two others, arrested on information furnished by the first, he will face a police line-up tonight for which more than 50 notices have been sent out to recent victims.

Police said the youth operated near large apartment houses in northwest Washington. According to officers of the robbery squad, he fits the description of the man who assaulted and robbed Mrs. Kathryn Goodwin, attractive field consultant for the Social Security Board on Sixteenth street, February 22.

Efforts to locate Mrs. Goodwin have been unsuccessful so far, police said.

Meanwhile a 42-year-old pickpocket returned to Washington several days ago on a warrant, was held for appearance in police line-up.

D. C. Suffrage Ballot to Carry Two Questions

An official ballot form, with two questions dealing with suffrage, was adopted by the executive committee of the Citizens Conference on District Suffrage last night. The ballot will be used in elections April 30.

By a 10 to 2 vote, the committee approved the following two questions:

"Do you want the right to vote for officials of your own city government?

Do you want the right to vote for President of the United States and for members of Congress from the District?"

An earlier proposal had suggested that only one question be printed: "Are you in favor of having the right to elect a District government, Representatives in Congress and the President and Vice President?" On the official ballot, each question is followed by "yes" and "no" blanks.

After approving the ballot, the committee, under Wilbur Finch, chairman, discussed precinct organizations and location of polls.

Suggestions also were made to attend hearings on the Norton-Capper and Randolph resolutions seeking national representation and suffrage for District residents. Representative Hatton Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, announced yesterday his committee has scheduled hearings for May 4 and 5.

Canned Glands May Prolong Human Lives

'Spare Parts' Can Be Supplied the Ailing by New Method.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 14.—A new method of prolonging human life by transplanting preserved human glands from a glass jar to a sick individual was announced today before the American Association of Anatomists.

Dr. George O. Gey of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, declared that methods had been worked out by which thryoid and parathyroid gland tissues could be grafted to the dried-up glands of individuals suffering from lack of hormone secretion from these glands. Tuese secretions are stimulating agents of the body.

Preservation of the glands to keep them alive for transplantation has been the most difficult problem, Dr. Gey said, but it is rapidly being solved by such experiments as those of Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, who has kept some tissues alive and growing for many years.

Preserving gland tissues is the newest step toward repairing the human body with spare parts in the same way that worn parts of a machine are replaced.

Such replacements do not offer man a hope of immortality, the Johns Hopkins University scientist said, but they open up new opportunities to save human lives.

Roosevelt's Son Gets Radio Unit Through Wife

Elliott Roosevelt yesterday acquired added influence in the radio world when the Federal Communications Commission granted permission to his wife, Ruth Googins Roosevelt, to purchase Fort Worth Broadcasters, Inc., operating company for radio Station KFJZ.

The President's second son will be president and secretary-treasurer of the corporation, while the Texas society girl whom he married in 1933 serves as vice president. Ownership of 313 out of 315 shares of the station's stock will be in Mrs. Ruth Roosevelt's name, with her husband and Harry Hutchinson each holding one share.

The commission found that the President's daughter-in-law had assets in excess of $89,500 and that her husband would be free to give nearly half his time to the station's affairs.

Young Roosevelt, who is president and general manager of the Hearst chain of radio stations, was elected a director-at-large of the National Broadcasters at their Washington convention in February. He signed a contract last fall for semi-weekly commercially sponsored broadcasts on incidents "in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen."

Purchase price for KFJZ, which now is controlled by R. S. Bishop, was stated as $57,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt, who were wedded five days after a divirce ended Elliott's brief marriage to the former Elizabeth Donner, of Philadelphia, have two children, Ruth Chandler, 3, and Elliott, jr., 20 months.

Benches Cut Down So Police Court Judges Can See

There's a little alteration job going on over at the new Police Court building—a job that involves saws and hammers.

When the building was opened last month, the judges discovered that their splendid oaken movie-set benches obscured the view of the courtroom to such an extent that the law clerk and the testifying witnesses were quite invisible to the judge.

Under the supervision of the municipal architect, the towering desks are being lowered five inches. The superfluous strip of wood is being sawed off the top, just below the fancy border.

Judge Edward M. Curran ascended his remodeled bench yesterday for the first time and seemed pleased at the broad vista before him. The alterations probably will be complete by next week.

Business Levy In D.C. Slated For Approval

District

The business privilege tax will be permanent, or without limitation, as incorporated in the District revenue bill.

This means that if the Commissioners or Congress wish to substitute a local income tax next year the gross receipts tax will have to be repealed. The law last year was drafted only as emergency legislation and so expires at the end of the current fiscal year.

Some of the "teeth" written into the new bill by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan are:

The exemption is lowered from $2,000 to $1,000.

No deductions will be allowed for payments of tangible personal property levies.

The tax will be clearly applicable to all rentals from realty and personal property as there has been some confusion under the present act.

Interstate commerce or trade from the States, will be specifically taxed because of the issue raised by Baltimore business men regarding the right of a municipality to tax interstate commerce.

The only likely opposition in the committee to the business tax faded yesterday when Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, who opposed it last year, said he would go along with the committee.

"It is an unfortunate form of tax," he said, "but I am not disposed to upset the work of the committee."

Somewhat tardily, sponsors of the District income tax were given indirect encouragement by President Roosevelt yesterday in his message to Congress.

An answer to members who questioned the feasibility of the District's taxing salaries of Federal employes came in a phrase of the message citing "needs" in the move toward recovery.

One of these needs, as set forth by the President, is "the subjecting of Government salaries and wages of all kinds to Federal and State income taxes."

Sponsors of the District income tax interpreted this as meaning that the President believes even the salaries of members of Congress should be taxed either by the States or the District of Columbia.

The Senate District Committee at a meeting called for 9:30 a. m. today will act on several pending local bills after giving final approval to the revenue measure, Senator King said.

The only important measure on which action is scheduled is a proposal of the Commissioners to modernize the District zoning act. This will be reported favorably by a subcommittee headed by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

While the bill to set up a lunacy commission has been approved tentatively by a sub-committee headed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, the committee clerk said it is not ready to be reported yet.

Erie County Indicts Sheriff for Perjury

Buffalo, N. Y., April 14 (AP).—Sheriff William M. Eberhardt, of Erie County, was indicted by a grand jury today on charges of perjury and subornation of perjury. The indictment was handed up as the climax of an investigation of vice and gambling conditions in Erie County. The grand jury charged the sheriff with giving false testimony in the inquiry.

Leaders Hope to Pool Spending in One Bill

Reaction

have prevented such a program as the President proposed. He reiterated his belief that the RFC "could do all that was necessary," without additional spending.

Friends of the Virginian said they did not believe he would oppose the strictly relief phase of the program, but he would probably vote against the new PWA spending-lending program.

Byrd Sounds Warning.

His Virginia colleague, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, warned that "if the pump-priming recommendations of today are passed, the deficit in the next fiscal year will be at least $5,000,000,000."

"In my judgment," said Byrd, "temporary and artificial benefits to be achieved by pump-priming on borrowed money inevitably will result in further undermining of the confidence of the people which is declining in the face of continuing deficits and inability to balance the budget."

Byrd expressed "accord with that part of the President's message which recommends taxation of tax-exempt securities and of tax-free salaries."

Republicans were virtually unanimous in their criticism of the "pump priming" features of the program, but generally shied clear of an attack on strictly relief spending. Senate Minority Leader McNary, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan; House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, and Representative John Taber, of New York, were among those who chorused their disapproval of recovery spending.

Democratic leaders countered with equally vociferous praise of the plan, and expressed confidence it can be passed without any serious delay of adjournment. They were counting on aids provided in the program for several special interest blocs, ranging from flood control and reclamation to Federal-aid highways, to muster majority support in Congress and backing from communities and interests affected throughout the country.

Longer Session Feared.

Although House Republican Leader Snell said it will "postpone adjournment for two or three months," Representative Pat Boland, of Pennsylvania, House Democratic whip, said "I think we can pass it in plenty of time to adjourn as planned on May 15."

In financial circles, the President's proposals were widely interpreted as "inflationary," but buying of stocks, commodities and Government bonds in Wall Street was cautious. Government bonds rose briskly, but purchase of stocks brought only a moderate rise.

Labor comment was generally favorable. President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said he stood with the President on his recommendation "to put a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours" but said he took that to mean one floor and one ceiling and "not a series of them."

Following a conference at the White House, President Homer Martin, of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.,) said "prospects are that the whole automobile industry in Michigan will be flat on its back this summer unless a program to stimulate purchasing power, such as the President proposed, is enacted."

Most jubilant over the President's message were members of the House roads bloc, led by Chairman Wilburn Cartwright, of the House Roads Committee. Appropriations for highways had been cut below $100,000,000 in the Agriculture Department bill, and Cartwright had demanded $101,000,000 more. The President's message unexpectedly accepted the item, and an estimate was prepared by the Budget Bureau yesterday. Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, manager of the Agriculture Committee, said the Cartwright increase will be accepted by the committee and put to a House vote Tuesday.

Favorable comment at the Capitol ranged from complete acceptance by leaders and moderate approval by members of mollified blocs, to complaints by extreme liberals that it "did not go far enough." Criticism ranged from complete rejection by Administration critics to selective denunciation of certain features of the program.

Senator Borah said he "would of course vote for whatever is reasonably necessary to take care of the unemployed and the hungry."

Borah Unconvinced.

"But as to the building and spending program otherwise," said the Idaho Independent, "I will have to be convinced, and I do not think there is much chance of convincing me. The spending program has failed to bring about recovery, and those countries which have had no such program are further advanced in recovery than we are."

Borah said that "when you take billions out of the taxpayers' pockets and undertake to feed it back, there is only one result—that is debts and more debts, taxes and more taxes, until finally you reach the precipice."

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, said "it seems to me the President is becoming very much disturbed and is calling for help."

"I want to help him," added Copeland, "if I think the help he asks for is of a correct type. But as a doctor, I have always thought that when a certain medicine brings the patient close to death, it shouldn't be tried again."

Commented Senate Minority Leader McNary: "The message proposes a complicated spending plan to lift the nation out of the present depression. It has been tried before without success."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Democrat), of Michigan, said, "I must reject this renewal of a profligate spending program with its deficits and debts because that is the route, in part, which has brought us unhappily where we are."

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, said he is "in sympathy with the spending program but I would a whole lot rather have had it spent out of private bank deposits."

Pittman said "they are now forced to correct a monetary error which consisted of too sudden and violent deflation when prosperity started by sterilizing gold and doubling bank deposits."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley called it "a very reasonable and a very constructive message." Barkley said it had "a fine tone and spirit and should go a long way toward reassuring the country."

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, declared "the severest critic of the President will approve the conciliatory tone of the message."

"The program," said Byrnes, "will start moving the wheels of business and I believe that with passage of the tax bill, private capital will again move to expand industry, which after all, is the only sure way to prosperity."

Rayburn Praises Program.

In the House, Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn said the program "will greatly facilitate recovery by creating work, enhancing opportunities for business and creating confidence."

Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, a leader of the Young Turk Democratic wing, said the program is "all right, but this is not going to solve the depression."

Maverick proposed calling an immediate Democratic caucus, attended by Cabinet members, to discuss party problems. He said there has not been a Democratic caucus in three years and "one is needed to discuss more fundamental things, such as wage-hour legislation, regional planning, and a more adequate housing program."

In Richmond, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, a leading House advocate of Government economy, said over the radio the program "should be a very great stimulant in all lines of business." From Virginia's own standpoint, he said, the President's proposal may bring more than $2,000,000 more for Virginia roads and prevent abandonment of 16 Virginia CCC camps. He said he was "greatly encouraged not only by the tone of the President's message, but by the conciliatory note that was sounded in the numerous conferences at the White House which I have attended within the last few days."

Others Comment.

"I continue to hope for a balanced budget," said Woodrum, "and the further elimination and curtailment of useless costs of Government, but we are faced with an acute condition and I think we should meet it. Therefore, I shall support the President's proposal."

Other comment:

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas: "It is a wonderful message. I think it will break the backbone of the depression."

House Minority Leader Snell: "The message proves that the whole situation has got beyond the Administration and they can't cope with it. They should sound a note of retrenchment instead of lifting the lid."

Representative Tabler (Republican), of New York: "Pump priming doesn't amount to much when the well is dry."

Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi: "If President Roosevelt's pump-priming program goes through, the public power bloc in the House will demand that not less than $100,000,000 be allocated to rural electrification. We propose to offer an amendment."

Senators Frown On Navy Ship Plea

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Naval Committee agreed tentatively yesterday to deny the Navy's requests for additional auxiliary vessels and an increase in tonnage of two proposed aircraft carriers.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said discussion of the naval expansion bill at a closed meeting indicated capital ship tonnage to be authorized under it would be increased to 135,000. This, Walsh said, would increase the cost of proposed naval construction $80,000,000, bringing total authorizations under the bill to $1,166,000,000, an increase of $45,000,000 over the figure approved by the House.

2 False Alarms Draw 15 Pieces of Apparatus

Fifteen pieces of fire apparatus and at least 500 motorists raced to the vicinity of DeRussey place, River road and Chesapeake street northwest last night when two false alarms were turned in within a few minutes.

Police broadcast a lookout for a man and a woman whom neighbors saw driving away in a car shortly before the procession arrived.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, April 14.—Spanish insurgents tonight whipped the ends of their 50-mile eastern Spanish front toward the Mediterranean on the south and Andorra on the north.

Gen. Miguel Aranda's troops drove from San Mateo into the little Castellon village of La Jana, only 9 miles by air from the sea and 14 miles by highway from coastal Vinaroz.

Far in the north, amid snow-covered mountain slopes, insurgents took control of the village of Tor, 3 miles from where Andorra's western frontier with Spain strikes the French border.

Center Bitterly Fought.

Nearly midway between these points, east of Balaguer, the government fought desperately in an effort to break the insurgent advance into the interior of Lerida province.

Government dispatches reported that after heavy fighting yesterday Catalan militiamen gained a foothold in the village of Vallfogona, two and one-half miles southeast of Balaguer.

Insurgents acknowledged there had been fierce attacks on their positions along the Segre River but said the onslaughts were repulsed.

Dynamiters Take Town.

Government reports said the entry of Catalan troops into Vallfogona was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage.

Then a wave of "dinamiteros" forced their way into the narrow streets, launching their homemade dynamite bombs into the retiring insurgent ranks.

House to house combat followed, the reports said, with heavy casualties on both sides.

U. S. Can Export 3,000 Fighting Planes in Year

By the Associated Press

New York, April 14.—If Europe wants to buy American-made warplanes for rearmament, more than 3,000 bombers and fighters—described by their makers as the fastest and most effective in the world—can be exported within a year, a survey today showed.

The British undersecretary for air announced yesterday that the government is considering the purchase of warplanes in the United States and Canada.

The nationalized French aviation industry, it was learned today, has anticipated the British by secretly placing orders for bombing and fighting aircraft with American manufacturers.

One American-made pursuit plane released for export has a sustained operating speed of more than 300 miles an hour, can climb to 30,000 feet and carries bombs as well as machine guns.

The greatest of the exportable bombers cruises at more than 200 miles an hour and can fly 2,500 miles nonstop with a load of explosives weighing more than 2½ tons.

In 1937, 18 American aircraft plants produced 3,187 planes, of which 949 were military types.

In January Leighton W. Rogers, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, Inc., announced the $158,000,000 worth of aircraft, engines and accessories being produced in the current fiscal year could be boosted to $345,000,000 in the next fiscal year "and still remain on a peace-time basis."

Reich Girl Imprisoned By French as a Spy

Japan Deplores Warships.

Tokyo, April 14 (AP).—The navy ministry spokesman today characterized reports the United States was building 50,000-ton battleships as "interesting but deplorable."

Work or Face Force, Daladier Tells 150,000

Aircraft Laborers Return; 20,000 Other Strikers to Go Back.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 14.—Premier Daladier's "national defense" cabinet tonight delivered a thinly veiled ultimatum to France's 150,000 strikers to evacuate factories and go back to work or face action from France's most powerful government in years.

The government "invited" the strikers to return to work by next Tuesday in a communique stating it would "use its authority for the common good."

As the powerful inner council of the cabinet drafted decrees to end labor disturbances, leaders on both sides of the conflict said the communique showed Daladier meant business and would brook no opposition.

The communique said the minister of labor would call a meeting Saturday to draw up collective contracts.

The government gained a round in its fight against strikes when workers in privately-owned aviation factories agreed to return to their jobs.

They accepted government proposals that they get the same 75-centime (two-cents) an hour increase in wages as workmen in nationalized airplane factories.

It was estimated an additional 20,000 strikers would return to work tomorrow under the agreement. Hundreds of workers in the nationalized factories, their strikes already settled, had returned to work this morning.

Americans Called Headline Readers

Lexington, Va., April 14 (AP).—A. Bernard Moloney, chief of Reuters (British) news agency in North America, told Washington and Lee University journalism students tonight that two major problems confronted foreign correspondents in the United States—the quantity of news handled and the way it is presented.

In connection with the presentation of news, he said, "America is rapidly becoming a nation of headline readers. And an informed public opinion cannot live upon headlines alone."

"To the foreign correspondent, he said, "it is incredible that such a vast amount of news should be either necessary or desirable." Referring to American methods of presenting news, he said there was "too much striving after effect."

Jewish Newspaper Asks Pope To Join 'War' Upon 'Ungodly'

By the United Press.

Boston, April 14.—Pope Pius XI is called upon by The Jewish Advocate to exert his influence in "opposition to the destructive forces of Satan let loose on earth."

Declaring Jews and Catholics "today particularly bear the brunt of the onslaught on the rights of the individual and of the group" in dictator nations, the Jewish newspaper's front page editorial tomorrow promises:

"Your Holiness, the Jews of the world stand ready to join with any force which will arise to lead our civilization back to sane thinking. A great figure is needed as a rallying point around which may gather all elements of religion, faith, democracy."

As a leader of a great faith, Pope Pius is invited to "issue the call which will unite as allies Catholics, Protestants and Jews in combating the spread of dangerous ideologies. . ."

Duce Reviews British Pact to Sign Saturday

By the Associated Press.

London, April 14.—Great Britain and Italy on Saturday will sign a friendship pact which many see as the first step toward a new line-up to break Adolf Hitler's hold on Europe.

The major immediate gain for each country is expected to be the removal of tension in the Mediterranean which, particularly during the Italo-Ethiopian campaign of 1935-36, threatened to cause war between them.

Through its long-range operation Britain hopes the new agreement will bring Italy back into the orbit of London and Paris, away from Germany's influence, thus strengthening Prime Minister Chamberlain's hand with Hitler.

Duce Reviews Draft.

In Rome, Premier Mussolini went over the draft agreement with British Ambassador Lord Perth and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

At the same time Count Ciano and the French charge d'affaires, Jules Blondel, signed a commercial accord designed to re-establish normal credit relations between France and Italy.

Announcement of the accord followed quiet negotiations which have gone on behind the smokescreen of a press controversy between the two countries over political differences.

It responded to the desire of Italian merchants for a relaxation of trade restrictions, clamped on as a part of Italy's economic self-sufficiency program.

Britain, France Confer.

Paris, April 14 (U.P.).—Great Britain and France were reported tonight to be tightening their defense arrangements on virtually a military alliance basis, coincident with discussions that may lead to an Anglo-French-Italian pact of friendship.

High official sources in Paris said British war ministry officials and air commanders have been consulting in Paris on mutual defense plans which may reach a stage of direct negotiation when Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet go to London soon in response to an official invitation.

The Daily Express in London reported an extensive "tightening up" of Anglo-French defense plans was being planned.

In emergency, the paper said, the French navy would accept responsibility for certain waters leaving Britain in charge of other areas with free use of French seaports and naval bases. At the same time, the British and French air forces would be treated as one unit with co-ordinated commands for both defense and attack.

British Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps conferred today with Bonnet and relayed a request from Prime Minister Chamberlain asking that France's new "national defense" government patch up its relations with Fascist Italy as quickly as possible.

Plea for Whitney Revealed to SEC

By the Associated Press.

Before a tense audience, Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, testified yesterday of the efforts of New York's social and banking aristocracy to delay the financial ruin of one of their own number.

Gay, who began his business career as a $3-a-week carrier of dry goods samples on the streets of New York, was a witness at the Securities Commission's examination into the failure of the firm of Richard Whitney.

Whitney, five times president of the New York Stock Exchange, is serving a term in Sing Sing Prison for misappropriation of customer's securities.

He told how he had refused a last-minute request of Whitney for a delay in further auditing of his books and added emphatically that it was not until March 1, 1938 that he learned Whitney had kept $175,000 of bonds and $221,000 of cash for nine months during 1937.

The bonds and cash belonged to the Stock Exchange gratuity fund, which is designed to provide cash benefits to families of deceased exchange members.

seven months of the 1938-39 fiscal year, with an additional $1,000,000,000 probable for the remainder.

Rural relief, $175,000,000 for the next fiscal year to the Farm Security Administration, for destitute farmers and rural rehabilitation.

National Youth Administration, $75,000,000 for relief of students unable to complete secondary education.

Civilian Conservation Corps, an additional $50,000,000 to maintain CCC camps at present strength (1,250.)

Loans to industry and public bodies, $1,500,000,000 now available at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The second group consisted of the two credit actions by the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury to stimulate business.

The third group, directed at boosting the Nation's purchasing power by providing new work, included:

Housing, $300,000,000 to the United States Housing Authority to build additional projects.

$1,450,000,000 for PWA.

Public works, $1,450,000,000 to the Public Works Administration, $450,000,000 for direct expenditure as immediate pump-priming, and $1,000,000,000 to be loaned and granted to States and their subdivisions under two optional plans. (One plan is the existing 45 per cent. grant, 55 per cent loan; the other, advancement of the whole sum to public bodies as loans without interest, with the Government paying the interest and the public body paying principal by amortization or rental.)

Highways, $100,000,000 additional to the budget, to the Bureau of Public Roads.

Flood control and reclamation, $37,000,000 on projects already authorized, but not appropriated for.

Federal buildings, $25,000,000 additional.

The President, in his radio address, hammered at the necessity for action, although he did not drape the business picture in black. He asserted that "Government cannot afford to wait until it has lost the power to act."

His own inaction since the depression's inception last autumn he explained by saying "and it is only within the past two months, as we have waited patiently to see whether the forces of business itself would counteract it, that it has become apparent that Government itself can no longer safely fail to take aggressive Government steps to meet it."

He apologized for addressing the public during Holy Week, but said he had decided to do so by the thought "that by speaking tonight there may be greater peace of mind and the hope of Easter may be more real at firesides everywhere. . ."

Repeatedly he restated his pledge of last January that he "would not let the people down," and said as a "personal word" that:

"I never forget that I live in a house owned by all the American people, and that I have been given their trust."

The President took the basic position that the purpose of the New Deal is and has been to "obtain a vastly increased 'citizen income' with the goal set at an $80,000,000,000 national income by 1940.

That was the national income in 1928. In 1932, he noted, it had fallen to less than $40,000,000,000, while by 1937 it had risen again to $68,000,000,000. He moved now to meet the emergency on the basis that the income this year at the present rate would total only $56,000,000,000, he said.

Fear Held Cause.

The President set "fear" as the cause of overproduction, and overprodutcion he set as the cause of the depression. "Fear of war abroad, fear of inflation, fear of Nation-wide strikes," he listed, remarking that "none of these fears have been borne out."

He said that purchasing power consistently lagged behind production, and stressed "certain highly undesirable practices" in business, and prices rising "faster than was warranted," as fundamental factors in the present situation.

Defending the New Deal from assertions that its proposals have hindered business and engendered fear, the President listed only four measures submitted by him since January 1, 1937, as those which in his view were of "major importance" to business. This list was: The ever-normal granary farm bill, tax-loophole-plugging legislation, wage-hour legislation, and legislation to remove "inequities from the undistributed profits tax."

He said flatly: "No other measures affecting business have been proposed."

The President did not explain why he omitted listing his proposal to amend the housing act, which he offered to the special session as a profound and far-reaching stimulus to business nationally, and the omission of the two most controversial measures of this Congress, his bills to reorganize the Supreme Court and the Government. Both of the latter have been pictured by business writers as major deterrents to business confidence.

Cites Recovery Aids.

As aids to recovery he named certain improvements in Government and business practice, stating he regarded as essential "the elimination of future tax-exempt bonds of all kinds of Government agencies; the subjecting of Government salaries and wages of all kinds to Federal and State income taxes; a serious undertaking to solve the railroad problem and problems of monopolistic practices and price-fixing."

He then pleaded for retention of the "great reforms" effected in the last five years "on behalf of the American people," and declared that "our immediate task is to consolidate atnd maintain the gains achieved."

The immediate effect of the vast program, it was believed, would be inflationary through the credit aspects of the message. The public works program cannot get into high gear before midsummer, but will be at top speed by the autumn. A total of 2,700 projects are now ready at the PWA for immediate approval, and will be sped in accordance with the extent to which they meet the President's requirements that no loan or grants be made any State or its subdivision on projects which cannot be started within six months of the date of the enabling legislation.

The President, after emphasizing the need for a "united national will," placed responsibility for making that will effective on every individual in the country. Corollary to that are certain "positive requirements," he said, noting as primary in these, "the duty of self-restraint," which he described as the duty of every patriotic citizen to "say to himself or herself, that immoderate statement, appeals to prejudice, the creation of unkindness are offenses not against an individual or individuals, but offenses against the whole population of the United States."

He stressed that "There can be no dictatorship by an individual or by a group in this Nation, save through division fostered by hate. Such division there must never be."

He ended his message to Congress on a high note, a plea for the use of the "Good Neighbor" policy in national life, closing thus:

"If we accept that high and splendid road, this free democracy will give successful answer to the fears and questionings which today trouble the minds and souls of men and women the world over."

In his radio address the President specified enactment of a wage-hour measure at this session of Congress as a definite means of more widely distributing prosperity. But his concrete recommendations were in the main limited to those listed in his message to Congress, much of which he repeated in his fireside chat.

He remarked the differences in the present depression and that of 1929-1933—safety of bank funds, comparative farm prosperity, the minimizing of security speculation and the higher national income—before stating that the new attack on depression will mean the raising by the Treasury of "less than a billion and a half dollars of new money" between now and July, 1939.

Mr. Roosevelt concluded by reaffirming his faith in the direction of the New Deal and by warning that abandonment of the Administration's purposes "would be to miss the tide and perhaps to miss the port." He said:

"I propose to sail ahead. I feel sure your hopes and your help are with me. For to reach a port, we must sail—sail, not tie at anchor, sail, not drift."

China Executes 8 High Officers And Hails Victorious Generals

tightening a steel ring around the walled city of Yihsien, northwest of Taierchwang, where the Japanese spearhead suffered a crushing defeat.

War bulletins said a Japanese unit was annihilated after almost fighting its way through at Yihsien. They said the city was besieged and supply lines cut so that the Japanese could receive food and munitions only by airplane.

(In London, D. J. Colville, British financial secretary to the treasury, told the House of Commons that if British banks approached the government for permission to lend to China, such requests would be "sympathetically considered."

(The chancellory of the exchequer, Colville added, was considering action to "encourage" the granting of long term loans to the Chinese government.)

Gen. Li, 45, is in command on the Shantung front with Gen. Pai, 45, in the field as Chiang's chief of staff. They both are natives of Kweilin, in Kwangsi Province.

Together they have revolted twice against Chiang. The fight against Japan gave them all a common cause.

Both entered the army as junior officers, became disciples of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese Republic.

When, in 1926, Chiang led the Kuomintang revolution, both joined him and won battles that were turning points in the Nationalist uprising. Li commanded the army that won the crucial battle of Kiukiang and Pai led the force that took Shanghai in 1927.

Later they organized an army to oppose Chiang. They were defeated and retired to Kwangsi Province, where they have ruled in partnership for a decade.

In 1936 they organized the "Kwangtung-Kwangsi anti-Japanese army" in another revolt against Chiang which also fizzled.

They remained in the background until the outbreak of hostilities with Japan last August.

While the armies remained stalemated on Shantung's plains, Chinese and Japanese air forces attempted to break the deadlock with bombing and machine-gunning raids on each other's positions.

Firebug Is Hunted As Beltsville Blaze Razes CCC Sheds

A fire visible for miles in the Maryland countryside last night destroyed two frame sheds at the colored CCC camp No. 18, near Beltsville. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

The flames, which leaped skyward 75 to 100 feet, demolished three trucks in one of the sheds and a large quantity of lumber in the other. Four hundred yards separate the sheds from the barracks.

Five persons were injured in fighting the blaze. Paul Deek, 25, a procurement officer, who lives at Berwyn Heights; Fred Layman, 30, a camp foreman, and Sam Hill, 21, colored enrollee, were hurt by falling timbers. Two firemen suffered burns on the hands.

Cause of the blaze was undetermined, but officials were investigating a rumor it might have been kindled by a discharged enrollee. A general alarm brought fire-fighting apparatus from Hyattsville, Bladensburg, College Park, Laurel, Riverdale and the Agricultural Experiment Center. The 600 CCC men

Treasury Frees Sterile Gold on President's Plea

Credit

The Treasury's action freeing its sterilized gold was taken after a conference between Secretary Morgenthau and Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System. One question understood to have been before them was whether the entire inactive gold hoard should be desterilized at once or in portions as the money is needed to finance the President's new recovery program.

It was decided to do the job at one stroke. Left undecided however, was the question as to whether the Treasury would now proceed to retire 90-day bills issued as a result of the gold sterilization plan or refund such short-term securities as they mature, keeping the cash based on the desterilized gold to take care of expenditures as they occur.

In the long view there is little substantial difference between the two courses of action, except in one case the Treasury would soon be required to start borrowing to finance the recovery program, and in the other would be relieved of that task for a few months. But in the end the Treasury's indebtedness would be approximately the same.

This question in all probability will be decided next Wednesday when the executive committee of the Federal Reserve system's "open market" committee meets with Eccles and Morgenthau to draft means of financing the huge spending program which the President yesterday laid before Congress.

The gold desterilized by the Treasury represented $1,182,974,522 of the yellow metal placed in an inactive fund established under the desterilization policy of December 1936, and $209,090,937 of the metal in the Treasury's general fund. The larger of the two sums was accumulated chiefly from gold imports. Under that policy, instead of issuing gold certificates against incoming gold, the Treasury locked it up—thus keeping it out of the credit base—and paid for it with money raised through the sale of Treasury bills.

Commencing last summer the original sterilization policy has been modified. In September the Treasury released $300,000,000 of the sterilized gold and in February the Treasury virtually scrapped the policy by announcing, retroactive to January 1, it would sterilize only gold imports in excess of $100,000,000 in any calendar quarter of the year. Gold already in the "inactive" or sterilized fund, however, was not affected by that order.

The mechanics of carrying out yesterday's decision to release all the sterilized gold were comparatively simple. Treasury bookkeepers wiped out the "inactive" gold fund on their books and transferred the amount to the Treasury's general fund as a part of the working balance.

At the same time they divided the amount of the released gold—in what proportions was not revealed—among the 12 Federal Reserve banks for deposit. Certificates evidencing these deposits were—or today will be—sent to the reserve banks. Behind the certificates are gold certificates supported by the newly released gold. The Treasury may now check against those deposits for whatever authorized purpose it desires. The reserve banks will issue its currency to satisfy the Government's checks.

Prior to the passage of the 1935 banking act deposit reserve requirements—the percentage of customers' deposits which commercial banks must keep in the reserve banks—was fixed by law. The 1935 act gave the Federal reserve governors power to change these requirements as circumstances might demand, except that statutory requirements could not be increased by more than 100 per cent. The board first exercised its authority under this act in July, 1936, increasing the statutory requirements by 50 per cent, effective August 15, 1936.

In January of 1937 the board proclaimed two successive increases in the requirements equivalent, in each instance, to 25 per cent of the statutory provisions, effective March 15 and May 1 that year. This action after it became fully effective had the result of doubling the statutory requirements and constituted an exhaustion of the board's power further to increase the requirements. The board, however, has power to lower the requirements back to the statutory levels.

The action proposed by the President and now contemplated by the board, in effect, would rescind the 1 st boost in reserve requirements, thus reducing them, as they now stand, by one-eighth or to a point equivalent to 87.5 per cent of the statutory requirements.

Statutory reserve requirements, their present level and the proposed requirements, expressed in percentages, for the various classifications of banks and deposits, follow:

	Statutory	Present	Proposed
Demand Deposits:
Central Reserve City Banks	13	26	22¾
Reserve City Banks	10	20	17½
Country banks	7	14	12¼
Time deposits:
All banks	3	6	5¼

Only banks in New York and Chicago fall into the "central reserve city" classification. The "reserve cities" are Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas and San Francisco. Banks in all other places fall under the classification of "country banks."

Thus at the present time Washington banks must deposit with the Federal Reserve Bank for this district 14 cents out of every dollar deposited in a demand account and 6 cents of every dollar deposited in a time or savings account. Under the new requirements the reserve requirements will be 12.25 cents and 5.25 cents, respectively.

6th to 15th Sts., Pa. to N.Y. Aves. Urged as Parking Meter Zone

A downtown area bounded by Pennsylvania and New York avenues and Sixth and Fifteenth streets was recommended to a committee of the Traffic Advisory Council last night as a proving ground for the District's experiment in parking meters.

The recommendation was made by a group of Washington citizens that included L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and John F. Victory of the Board of Trade.

William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, told the committee that meters in the vicinity of banks will limit parking to 15 minutes while those in the shopping area will be timed for one hour. Van Duzer said he hoped the experiment would reduce traffic congestion by giving shoppers a "chance to make their purchases and move their cars for other shoppers."

Bankrupt Statesmanship.

Stripped of its camouflage the President's message to Congress yesterday is simply a call for another emergency spending program of colossal proportions. The proposal is to counter the present depression by the methods which were instrumental in creating it. Here is bankrupt statesmanship.

The national credit would not be immediately shattered by the billions of uncovered expenditure and dubious loans which Mr. Roosevelt plans to add to the present national debt. And this program would in all probability have a temporarily stimulative effect. Money cannot be poured out in such quantities without making the wheels of some industries turn more briskly—for a time.

But everyone ought to realize that the beneficial effects of this spending program would be transient. Everyone should know that non-recurrent outlays of this sort can only give a temporary fillip while the additional debt thereby created remains as a permanent depressing factor. Everyone should by this time recognize that "the basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital." And, to quote further from a recent speech by the Secretary of the Treasury, this involves continued "progress toward a balance of the Federal budget."

The President's current program is diametrically opposed to that advocated by his Secretary of the Treasury only five months ago. If approved by Congress it will impair the credit of the Federal Government. And, as has been wisely said: "Upon the unimpaired credit of the United States Government rest the safety of deposits, the security of insurance policies, the activity of industrial enterprises, the value of our agricultural products and the availability of unemployment . . . National recovery depends upon it."

Franklin Delano Roosevelt spoke simple truth when he sounded that warning to the Nation soon after taking office. Yet yesterday, in cloudy, evasive phrases, he sought to argue that the opposite is true. He sought to demonstrate that the credit of the Government is immaterial if the national income in terms of uncertain dollars is temporarily boosted by deficit financing. The tragedy, as his past words testify, is that he knows this is not so.

In less than three years now Mr. Roosevelt will lay down the seals of office. His second term of trusteeship for the welfare of the United States will then be finished. But that will be only the turning of a page in American history. The country must go on, profiting from whatever benefits, struggling with whatever burdens, its thirty-second President may have left behind him.

The program presented to Congress yesterday would prove a dangerously heavy burden for the future. It carries no promise of permanent improvement. It does contain a virtual guarantee of another collapse, probably sharper and more disastrous than the present, as soon as the temporary intoxication of spending borrowed money has passed away. Mr. Roosevelt's earlier statements show that he is aware of this. Therefore, the conclusion is inescapable that his primary objective is to ride out the present term and let the future take care of itself.

When the executive shows itself deficient in a sense of long-range national responsibility the responsibility of the legislative arm of government is accentuated. The duty of Congress is not merely to pass constructive measures desired by the Administration, but also to defeat destructive proposals. And in this case the path of duty is clear. A program which might so easily debauch the credit of the Government must be defeated.

It must be defeated so that the Administration will be forced to turn to that fostering of "the full application of the driving force of private capital" which the Secretary of the Treasury recently defined as the only rational course. It must be defeated so that the Democratic Party can itself be saved from that shipwreck on the "rocks of loose fiscal policy" against which the President himself sounded warning five years ago. It must be defeated because adoption of a program so obviously dangerous would jeopardize the future of the entire Nation.

"Our immediate task," said Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, "is to consolidate and maintain the gains achieved." That is the simple truth. That summarizes why this program must be defeated.

The Program Analyzed.

The President has presented Congress with a three-part program, entailing additional appropriations for extension of work relief, resumption of large-scale pump-priming activities, and measures designed to increase the resources of the country's banks.

The amount asked for the WPA—$1,250,000,000 to be expended during the first seven months of the next fiscal year—would permit a monthly rate of outlay nearly 70 per cent higher than the average cost of work relief in the first three-quarters of the present fiscal year.

To this total would be added unbudgeted outlays for the Farm Security Administration, the NYA and the CCC amounting altogether to $300,000,000. These sums are asked for on the assumption that no reductions in the numbers on work relief will be made during the period covered, and without any suggestion as to methods of improving the system of relief administration.

The plan to revert to PWA pump priming raises a number of questions. That program having presumably been abandoned in favor of a policy of more direct job creation, through the WPA, an explanation of the reason for the change of procedure is in order. Experience under the PWA demonstrated conclusively that the construction of useful public works entails a very large outlay per man employed. As a means of reducing abnormally heavy unemployment, this type of emergency outlay is admittedly inefficient.

That, however, is not the only objection to the PWA program. The method of financing is also open to serious criticism. The President suggests that the whole cost might be financed by Federal non-interest bearing loans, made to State and local governments, or by a combination of loans and outright grants. This procedure would reduce the amount of the ultimate Federal obligation incurred. But it would also be tempting already overburdened, heavily-indebted local governments to dip into the Federal Treasury and thus lay up more trouble for the future.

Borrowing for relief and other purposes has created a very difficult situation for many cities, as shown by testimony recently given before a Senate committee by a number of municipal research directors. This group, with ample data to support its views, warned that financing relief by emergency borrowing has created a situation which in many cases "portends insolvency, if the tendency is allowed to continue."

The President has also requested amendments to the Housing Authority act to permit the expenditure of an additional $300,000,000 on construction projects. This is a deplorable indiscretion. The work of slum clearance is not of an emergency character and should never be confused with work relief measures. So far only a few housing contracts, entailing limited outlays, have been signed. If the work is to be effectively done, it must proceed carefully. To push the program would not only mean certain waste but would also tend completely to disorganize a new organization embarking upon a very difficult and untried program.

Adequate comment on the recommended appropriation of $100,000,000 for public roads is provided by the President's own recent objections to Congressional efforts to obtain more Federal aid for road building. And it was only last November that Secretary Morgenthau, in his address calling for a "determined movement toward a balanced budget," urged reduction in highway expenditures as the first item on his retrenchment program.

The proposal to de-sterilize gold and reduce reserve requirements of member banks by $750,000,000 is a move patently designed to give an inflationary stimulus to the markets. The release of $1,400,000,000 of gold, enabling the Treasury to deposit an equal amount of gold certificates to its credit with the Reserve Banks, would provide a very convenient fund for covering part of the cost of the spending program. Such outlays, together with the liberalization of reserve requirements, would add to the already large volume of existing excess reserves. The total would be pushed far above the $3,000,000,000 level, regarded as so menacing a short time ago.

Chairman Eccles, of the Reserve Board, has stated that he favors de-sterilization of gold as a means of generating inflationary psychology under present conditions. He does not comment on what would happen if an inflationary price advance were really to get under way after the Treasury has given up its gold and spent much or all of it. The power to tighten reserve requirements would be very limited and it is not at all likely that the Federal Reserve Banks would try to sell Government bond holdings in the open market as a means of reducing member-bank excess reserves.

Thus, to far-seeing individuals it seems highly dangerous for the authorities to relinquish the power to control the expansion of bank credit, based on a huge volume of excess reserves, for the sake of giving an inflationary impetus to business.

The various expedients employed in financing this huge relief program, which does not include the $1,500,000,000 which the RFC has been authorized to lend to private industry, tend to minimize its actual burden. Loans recoverable in whole or in part will presumably take care of part of the cost. The release of gold by the Treasury will also provide new purchasing power without any additions to the public debt.

The comparative ease with which the Treasury can lay its hands on the needed funds is actually one of the most disturbing aspects of the situation. It lulls the public into a belief that the inflationary devices employed to pump money into the channels of circulation are comparatively harmless. The public credit of the United States will stand up under tremendous strains for a very long period. It has already done so. But, as the experience of other countries has shown, when the Government's credit once begins to sag, collapse is apt to be startlingly sudden.

Conducive To Understanding.

Plans of the Committee for Industrial Organization to establish itself on a permanent basis as a rival of the American Federation of Labor occasion no surprise. In the public mind the C. I. O. is already recognized as a separate entity. Failure of the peace negotiations between the two labor groups a few months ago left virtually no hope of a merger. Under these circumstances the C. I. O.'s move to consolidate its position is entirely reasonable.

In theory the permanent organization of a rival to the A. F. of L. will be keenly regretted by many friends of labor. Presumably it will mean that the interests of working men in the United States will be divided between two major federations for a considerable period. The sharp split between industrial and craft unionism will be confirmed. That is not a pleasant prospect to any one who believes in orderly collective bargaining.

It does not follow, however, that this outlook will be made more gloomy by reorganization of the C. I. O. on a permanent basis. The schism between the two labor camps is an established fact. Even the most optimistic leaders do not expect to see the C. I. O. and the new unions it has created march back into the A. F. of L. And so long as the present uncertain relationship between them exists it is more conducive to friction than co-operation.

When one section of a national labor organization revolts and is ousted a bitter fight between the rival factions is the natural outcome. Such fighting is likely to continue so long as each group feels it necessary to justify its own position. As soon as a clean break has been made, however, tension may be relaxed and a new basis for co-operation may be gradually developed.

There will always be a strong incentive for labor groups in this country, as in any other, to work together. Permanent organization of the C. I. O. should give that centripetal force a better chance to operate. Rivalry will continue, of course, but with the two organizations on an equal footing, it should lose much of its bitterness. Thus the way may be paved for a co-operative working agreement.

That outlook is not as pleasant as a reamalgamation of the two labor groups would have been. But it is certainly more promising than continuation of the deliberate sniping in which the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. now indulge.

Too Easily Squelched.

Revision of the plans for the Jefferson Memorial has not been sufficient to stem the tide of criticism Notwithstanding recognized improvements suggested by the Boylan commission, protests stream into The Post in proportions approaching the torrent which helped materially to veto the original recommendations. Some object to the non-utilitarian aspect of the proposed monument; others inveigh against the site selected; still others criticize the design, evidently agreeing with the significant opposition of the Fine Arts Commission to a stereotyped, classical pantheon.

Now another and most impressive voice is added to the chorus. Senator Thomas, of Utah, a member of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, has reaffirmed his conviction that a better site than the Tidal Basin is available at the foot of East Capitol street. Potomac Park, he points out, is already well developed. The Senator quotes a statement by the late John Russell Pope—the architect retained by the commission—to the effect that the Anacostia heights would ultimately be the best location for the memorial in view of the city's inevitable development in that direction.

For somewhat the same reasons, Senator Lonergan, another member of the commission, is known to have urged Lincoln Square for the memorial. Senator McNary, a third member, went on record originally in favor of a site in the Mall. In the end, however, all three Senators yielded to the Tidal Basin advocates.

Senator Thomas now says that they were "squelched." If so, they showed precious little of the independence presumed to go with a toga. Moreover, they misjudged badly public sentiment on the matter. In any event, it is now plain that vital objections to the memorial plans are shared by some members of the Boylan commission itself. This being the case, a fresh start in consideration of this project would seem to be demanded.

A Chicago schoolboy writes upside down and backwards. Wise boy, that. He's getting ready for the time soon to come when the world will be completely topsyturvy.

The Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be so much popular dissatisfaction with a piece of cold marble as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, I suggest that the name of our Congressional Library be changed to that of the Thomas Jefferson Library. The appropriation could be applied toward an international department to exchange books on science, art, invention, and especially medical knowledge.

We would thus be establishing a much more appropriate memorial to him, in view of his devotion to the subject of education as exemplified by his establishment of the University of Virginia.

S. C. McCANDLESS.
Washington, April 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the hot controversy over the placement of the Jefferson Memorial I would like to point out that, as one of Virginia's most distinguished sons, there might be some point to placing the memorial on Virginia soil.

The idea of locating it on the banks of the Potomac overlooking and even dominating Washington does not seem so inane to me as sinking him in the swamp that has been chosen.

Jefferson liked the hills, as Monticello proves.

Alaska For Refugees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I felt the same way as "E. B." does about the President's plea of making a haven for the persecuted European people. But Mrs. Lansburgh's plan has entirely changed my views about this matter.

If her plan of building up new communities in Alaska could be carried out, it would be very foolish to pass up this opportunity of getting such a good stock of people to develop our territories.

D. LORE.
Washington, April 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I shared "E. B.'s" ideas about the President's plan to provide a home for the persecuted, but the suggestion of Mrs. Lansburgh to set up new communities has changed them entirely.

As long as these unfortunates will not add to our unemployment, we would make a big mistake to pass up this opportunity to extend a helping hand to our persecuted Christian brethren, and at the same time increase and develop our natural wealth. F. SMITH.

Student On Group Health.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to Dr. Earl B. McKinley, it should be pointed out that the Group Health Association is not an example of "socialized medicine" but a plan for "group medical care."

George Washington University, the medical school of which is headed by Dr. McKinley, has a plan for "group medical care" covering the students. Many other institutions and industrial concerns have such a plan. The plan at George Washington is similar to GHA in that the number of persons covered and the number of physicians serving them are approximately the same.

Certain differences between the two plans, however, make the university plan unsatisfactory, among which are: (1) Students are forced to contribute to the plan whether they wish to use it or not; (2) the charge made to students is less than that made by GHA, but the service it buys is so inadequate that most students do not bother to avail themselves of it, and to these students it is money wasted which would go a long way toward purchasing adequate care; (3) the number of visits of students to physicians is very limited, instead of being unlimited, and excess visits are subject to a fee which students feel is likely to be the physician's main interest; (4) students form only a small proportion of the practice of the physicians on the university "panel," whereas GHA members are the main concern of GHA physicians; (5) students have no voice in the administration of the university plan, whereas GHA is democratically administered.

These are a few of the reasons why many George Washington students who are eligible have joined GHA, as I have done.

The second answer to Dr. McKinley is that "socialized medicine" is already being practiced, and properly so, in illnesses of acute public concern, such as insanity, tuberculosis and syphilis. St. Elizabeths and the tuberculosis hospitals are examples of "socialized medicine," and for such institutions GHA has only praise. But group health, itself, has nothing to do with "socialized medicine."

Alexandria History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The archeology of Alexandria, Va., is quite as interesting, I am sure, as that of ancient Alexandria, in Egypt, and although the latter is somewhat further removed from us in point of time, the Egyptologists write more accurately about the history of their town than Virginians seem to do about theirs.

I note in The Post April 10 the following:

The origin of Gadsby's was the building of a City Tavern in 1752. Here the Alexandrians celebrated the King's birthday before the Revolution, and in 1792 John Wise built a pretentious addition on the corner of Cameron and Royal streets, operating the two still as the City Tavern. An English caterer, John Gadsby, purchased the hostelry in 1794, changing the name to Gadsby's Tavern. Under this name it was operated until 1818, and became famous throughout the colonies.

This is an inaccurate statement. Some years ago, while a member of the reportorial staff of The Post, I searched out the history of Gadsby's Tavern, and the personal history of John Gadsby.

John Gadsby was not "an English caterer." By birth he was a London man; by education an architect. He came to Alexandria after the Revolution to practice his profession; and many of the eighteenth century houses in that city were designed and built by him. On the best of authority I am informed that the War Department (Q.M.C.), which restored Arlington, has positive information that Gadsby designed and built the famous old Custis-Lee mansion.

In the line of his profession, he designed and built for John Wise, a tavern keeper of Alexandria, the three-story building at the corner of Royal and Cameron streets. It was known as the City Tavern, at the Sign of the Bunch of Grapes, later simplified to the City Tavern. Wise after operating the tavern for a year or so, defaulted in his debt to Gadsby, and the latter was forced to take over the tavern to protect his equity. Thus he was projected into the hotel business.

When he became maitre d'hotel, the old City Hotel, next door, was, and had been for a number of years, a theater. The antiquarians will be hard put to it, I dare say, to prove that John Gadsby ever had anything to do with the City Hotel of 1752—and yet it bears a sign which says it was the original Gadsby's Tavern, and people pay a fee to go through it. Would not its real significance be as much a hallmark of fame as its pseudo-history?

C. I. O. And The Transit Company.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to commend the editorial in The Post of April 12 entitled "Promising the Moon." The efforts of C. I. O. organizers to win over the employes of the Capital Transit Co. from the A. F. of L. by "promising the moon" is naive indeed. You state truly that the issue is not just local but national.

The present tendency of union leaders constantly to demand higher wages and shorter hours irrespective of ability to pay is harmful to the entire economic structure of the country and perhaps most harmful to the very class they seek to help—the workers themselves. How do the thousands who a year ago were conducting sit-down strikes in the steel and motor industries and who today have no jobs feel about the promises of their leaders? How do the tens of thousands of railroad employes feel who received a substantial wage increase last year and who today have been dismissed because of the inability of the railroads to earn a sufficient amount to meet fixed charges?

Even if the C. I. O. could make good its promises and compel the transit company to grant the proposed wage increases, the result would be unemployment for hundreds who now have steady work and good pay.

One doesn't have to be a C. P. A. to figure this out. The annual report of the company for 1937 shows total operating receipts of $11,090,000, while wages, taxes, maintenance, depreciation, interest and other charges amounted to $10,952,000, leaving a profit margin of only $138,000. It is obvious from the above that the company is in no position to add a million or so dollars to its pay roll. It is also quite obvious that any further substantial increase in wages could only be met by reducing amount spent in some other departments. The first step in such curtailment would doubtless be in the amount spent for maintenance of tracks and equipment. For the year 1937 the company spent slightly more than $1,500,000 on this item, and the greater portion of it represented money paid labor. To reduce this item, therefore, would mean loss of jobs to the men as well as poorer transportation service to the public.

Another item where the company would doubtless have to skimp in the event coverage of interest on its bonds were threatened is that of depreciation. This represents money set aside out of gross receipts to replace property as it wears out. At present a substantial portion of this depreciation money is being used to pay for new buses and streetcars. To reduce this amount substantially, therefore, would prohibit the further purchase of new equipment and would necessarily mean a gradual deterioration in the class of service rendered. This in turn would mean loss of patronage and, of course, necessitate further economies by the company and more men would lose their jobs.

Criticism Of The A. M. A.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American Medical Association, judging from the papers, fears state medicine and has sat by while the demand for socialized medicine has grown to such proportions they were unprepared to combat it with constructive changes. They have resorted to the tactics of a bully by using their strength of organization, which is mighty, on their doctor membership.

Many forward thinking doctors in the United States are ready to welcome some change in ethics that will conform with the times, but the American Medical Association has so "Hitlerized" their vote for a change that there is no opportunity for them to express their own will.

Comparison Of Sentences.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Richard Whitney from birth had every chance to be a good and useful member of society. For stealing millions, he was sentenced to serve three years and a few months.

A few days ago, the press carried meager reports of the conviction and sentencing of Ellsworth and Ellis Tippett, one of these boys being 17 years of age and the other 20 years of age. These boys stole small amounts of money and they were each sentenced to 26 years.

I ask you if that is justice?

The Post Impressionist

Death In The Forenoon.

I HAD been reading Reamur's "History of the Ants," and under that stimulus decided to keep a few of the insects under my observation. I borrowed from the entymologist next door a dessicator of about a pint capacity, and armed with one of our tablespoons from which the silver has worn off, I went off on a safari to a sandhill near my home.

The only nests I could find at this spot were of one sort—the usual truncated cone of pulverized earth thrown up about a single hole. After digging up half a dozen of these nests to a depth of about six inches, I found two with the inhabitants at home. One had the small, red variety, light in color; the other contained the larger and darker red ones. Together with as many "eggs" as I could find, I scooped perhaps half a hundred of each species of ants into my glass and brought them home.

* * *

They seemed disposed to take their imprisonment lightly and at once began excavation and exploratory proceedings. Isolated groups, finding themselves separated by only a fraction of an inch around the sides of the jar, would wiggle-waggle their feelers, pause as if listening for something, then begin tunneling frantically toward one another. Soon the jar presented an amazing amount of activity, with everybody bent on digging. In two hours not a single member of the clan of larger ants could be seen.

Bored by the inaction within my little arena, I decided upon a strategem to start the play. I captured a fly, disabled it somewhat and thrust it within the glass.

At first there was no excitement. Then one large red ant, scuttering by, cocked its head toward the fly and judged the offering attractive. Keeping a discreet distance away, the ant pecked at the fly's wing distractedly with its mandibles, then, as if recalling appointment elsewhere, abandoned the whole idea. Afterward, perhaps half a dozen of the larger ants put on the same act.

The apparent spirit of disinterestedness all about must have mollified the fly, for it now seemed to revive from my rough handling, turned over on its feet and stood up. A large red ant, with only its antennae visible from the depths of a hole, claimed this for zero hour and went over the top. It seized a hind leg in its mandibles. The fly let loose a kick that spun the ant at least half an inch away.

* * *

At this time the real battle to the death began. It lasted almost half an hour—from 10 o'clock of a Sunday morning, to the station announcement of the next radio program—and the hapless fly was still feebly working its legs as the ants finally dragged it down a hole.

Having been seized by the wing, the fly began new defense tactics. In spite of its evident helplessness, it struggled to its feet and dragged the ant about in rapid jerks all over the battle plain. At first the ant made no effort to do anything else but hang on. Then, the fly, having caught hold of a bit of twig embedded on the plain, clung there doggedly, resisting all efforts of the lone ant to pull it backward.

The ant's small abdomen (I had a magnifying glass by now) was working convulsively to brace with its feet and pull the fly toward a nearby hole. Up to this time it had made no attempt to use its mandibles or stinger upon the body of the fly. Having succeeded several times in turning the fly over on its back to a more advantageous position, the ant now ceased its efforts to pull and seemed to be giving out a general call for help.

At sporadic intervals, several of the larger ants came over to investigate the occurrence, but to all intents took only the roles of frigid bystanders. Finally, one of them did walk up boldly and poke at the fly's head but at the instant got such a bop from a foreleg of the fly that it was bowled over like a ball to quite a distance. That was a challenge too direct to be ignored. It walked deliberately to the rear of the fly and, too, laid hold of a wing. Then another and another ant came to the fray.

Suddenly the ants won. The fly let go. Seven or eight of the ants now began dragging the fly one way, then the other. The fly, burdened with the hosts bent on mayhem or worse, dragged them back to his twig. At times an ant would let go whatever it had hold of, pause an instant in front of the fly, then barge in to attack with stingers (which I could see) bent up for action. With forelegs and mandibles, the ants were trying to turn the fly over on its back again.

Eventually the efforts of the fly became less aggressive, although still kicking violently at times. By now the ants were all over it, biting and tearing the head, wings and body of their victim. When the fly had been dragged to the edge of the hole, all in a bunch gave it one last, concentrated sting in whatever part of its body they were nearest to. Then, as by signal, they all moved away to duties interrupted when called to the front.

One lone ant, whose unusually dry and withered appearance I had noted at first, and which had been the original attacker, was left to pull the fly the remaining distance to the hole. Since there was now no resistance at all, the task was routine.

At the hole entrance a pair of ants appeared to aid in squeezing the fly downward. Pushing from behind, the original warrior saw its victim disappear. Rubbing its forelegs together, as if to wash its hands of the whole matter, it hurried away somewhere.—F. D.

Nazi Reasoning.

THE GERMANS have made many important contributions, but none more fascinating than the principle behind Hitler's recent plebiscite on the seizure of Austria. This one should be a great comfort to all criminals, for it holds that after a pickpocket has stolen a watch he may call the operation a rescue, vote himself title to the watch and prosecute the owner for having possessed it.

PEGLER.

By the same token, for example, Richard Whitney did not steal money from his victims but rescued it, and not he, but they, should now be on their way to cells in Sing Sing, if not the electric chair. American prisons are crowded with rescuers who will welcome the day when the Hitler concept is adopted here, and no doubt if they were polled on the subject they, too, would vote as the German nation did.

The arrest of Chancellor Schuschnigg for treason to Germany in refusing to surrender Austria until he was forced to do so is consistent with the Hitler policy. He may face a firing squad for this, because if the German reasoning is correct he certainly was guilty of a very grave offense.

• • • •

SIMILARLY, any man who resists a stickup or burglar would deserve a long term in prison and the death penalty if anyone were killed by his unwise and illegal resistance.

According to the old and perhaps erroneous standard, Chancellor Schuschnigg was a rather stanch patriot. His attitude was that which the world has learned to expect of patriots and had the support of many precedents previously considered honorable. If the Germans had won the war to make the world safe for democracy and had rescued the United States our people would have expected that Woodrow Wilson would be treated with the honors of war and not as a traitor to Germany. Like Schuschnigg, he had no feeling that he owed allegiance to Germany. Yet by the present argument Mr. Wilson was a traitor to the Fatherland, and, moreover, any head of any nation which is defeated by Germany in a future war may expect to be punished for treason.

This goes back to and indorses the "Hang-the-Kaiser!" slogan which was heard from the more angry patriots on the allied side between 1914 and 1918, but which was repudiated by the victors for various reasons. Perhaps the repudiation was dictated by consideration for the future. It was conceivable to historians, at least, that a day might come when the hanging of the Kaiser could be cited to justify the hanging of a King of England or a President of France or the United States.

Yet if Germany now imprisons or executes Schuschnigg for opposing the rescue of his country, that forbearance of the Allies will have been wasted and a great popular thrill will have been sacrificed for nothing.

• • • •

IT MAY BE REMEMBERED that the Americans, at least, engaged in rescue work long before Hitler's Germans. The Americans wanted no loot beyond a few souvenirs, and their mission in the war was to rescue the German people from the Kaiser. In the end the Allies merely chased him off, however, and not even the most hysterical patrioteer on the allied side attempted to argue that he had been guilty of treason to France, Belgium, Britain, Japan, the United States, Cuba, Haiti and some 19 or 20 other countries.

There seems to be no use of our trying to understand the Hitler mentality, for we are steeped in the tradition that the thief or murderer in a given crime is the one who is guilty of wrong and that the victim is the offended party. Obviously, either the Germans or we are crazy when they, as a whole nation, solemnly march to the polls and vote that Hitler was right in stealing an old-established and highly civilized country and just as solemnly write themselves a clear title to the stolen property.

If we are a normal people the Germans think upside down. According to their mentality, a report of a bank robbery would say, "Three armed rescuers held up the First National Bank, executed the cashier and two clerks for resisting destiny and rescued $150,000. They then held a plebiscite and unanimously voted 'Ja' on the proposition 'Shall we keep the money?' "

The Circus Strike.

Strikes have at last invaded the circus, after being about everywhere else. Labor troubles filled all four rings of "the Greatest Show on Earth" in Madison Square Garden, New York, a few nights ago.

• • • •

Four hundred property men, animal handlers and other circus workers struck just before circus time, compelling the Maharajah and Maharanee of Nepal to stage their triumphal entry afoot in the opening pageant instead of on their royal elephants, and otherwise crippling the big show.

• • • •

The net result was a sit-down strike by the animals. We may yet see the National Labor Relations Board called in to settle the question why elephants never forget and why elephant handlers have so little to remember.

• • • •

There were such stormy meetings between the strikers and the circus officials that Frank Buck was sent over to the convention hall several times because of his reputation for "bringing 'em back alive."

• • • •

One of the big moments of the show came when a midget was accused of staging a sit-down strike and heatedly explained that he was not sitting down at all but standing at his full height.

• • • •

Numerous rumors ran through the big top. The most disturbing one was that the Siamese Twins were having a major crisis, one wanting to string with Mr. Lewis and the other sticking with Mr. Green.

• • • •

There were also stories that the Fat Lady, while incapable of a walkout, had staged a "waddle-out," contending that anybody could see she couldn't make both ends meet.

• • • •

The strike among the animal handlers swept along until it reached the giraffes, where there was a neck-and-neck struggle.

• • • •

There was considerable relief among the circus owners when word came that the seals had agreed to play ball, but this was offset by word from labor headquarters that the Blood-Sweating Behemoth had joined the strikers, charging that its breakfast had been cut from a ton and a half to one ton of hay.

The circus's star attraction this year is Gargantua, the wildest gorilla in captivity. But if these circus strikes keep up he will be no wilder than the circus owners.

• • • •

The country awaits the 1938 circus in suspense and anxiety. It is not going to be much fun finding the jumbo peanut concession picketed and the pink lemonade stand labeled "Unfair to Organized Labor." Not to mention the possibility of the elephant herd being kept out of the show because of a battle between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

Barcelona Letter

By Lawrence A. Fernsworth.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Barcelona, March 30.

BARCELONA and all loyalist territory has been passing through cruel, bitter days. But the natural resiliency of the people is asserting itself. The war is being carried on. Everybody is digging in everywhere preparing for heroic resistance.

One no longer speaks of this as a civil war. In loyalist Spain it has long since become known as the War of Independence. It is a fight against the Italian and German invader. Franco's name is hardly ever mentioned here. Spaniards, who have an uncanny intuition, a faculty for penetrating straight to the truth of any situation, have long ceased to give Franco any importance.

They know that the 14 Italian generals now here (four more than the number that, according to Mussolini's boast, took Santander), as well as the German generals, are engaged in a war of conquest of Spain, and that Franco is less than their puppet. A puppet moves when the strings are pulled, but in the case of Franco his masters no longer bother to pull the strings.

The Germans, with their recently established airbase at Pollensa, on the Island of Mallorca, come to the coast daily with their bombers, smashing to smaller bits, if possible, such coast cities as Tortosa, Sagunto, Tarragona, Reus, Binicarlo. All but a handful of people have left these cities, but of these handsful there are always victims. The workers remain heroically at their places. Being bombed and machine-gunned while making war supplies or while on the front lines is all the same. One is a soldier and cannot desert.

"A Sight To Tear One's Heart."

THE RECENT Barcelona bombardments through which I passed were horrible beyond description. The flight of human beings through the streets with their bundles and bags was a sight to tear one's heart, and never to be forgotten. Ants run like that, wildly, when their homes are being destroyed.

And the end is not yet. Spaniards here know that there is no end of the savagery to which rebels and foreigners will not resort. How many there are with whom I have spoken, who all too well know what will happen to them if "the invaders" come and find them. There is terror in their eyes as they speak of it—or in their hearts. They are not deceived by fair words. The fair words may fool foreigners abroad but they do not fool the Spaniard who knows the people with whom he is dealing.

After the fall of Malaga last year I saw refugees fleeing along the roads from Malaga to Almeria to Murcia. They had been bombed and machine-gunned from the air. Then, as in the case of Guernica and Durango, the reports were called false by rebel apologists. Franco went so far as to deny that his planes had left the ground on the day of the Guernica bombing. Unfortunately these stories were only too terribly true.

It is now feared that gas will be the next thing. A pretext will be found. It will be said that the government started the use of gas. Insurgent radio stations have already suggested something like that.

The government sticks together despite repeated rumors of divergencies. Rumor mongers are always busy in Spain and when one rumor has been run to earth two others spring up in its place.

All classes from 19 to 28 years inclusive have now been called to the colors. Volunteer divisions are being formed of men not included in these classes. Two volunteer divisions sponsored by the Anti-Fascist Youth's Alliance is composed mostly of boys 17 and 18 years old.

The win or die spirit is strong. Loyal Spaniards will not allow the invader easily to trample upon them and there are thousands of them in their hearts convinced that for them it is either liberty or death.

People Hurt By British, French Stand.

THE PEOPLE are deeply hurt by the attitude of England and France, for they feel they are fighting the cause of those countries as well as their own. They do not understand why they do not let them buy arms. Strangely, they are not angry—only mortally hurt in their deep, patient souls. Spaniards can be such a wonderful people when one knows them. I mean the common people—who for generations have suffered and worked—and who have thought a great deal, notwithstanding their frequent illiteracy. But there is an unbridgeable chasm between them and the classes who have always trodden upon them and are now united to crush them.

Last night I was the dinner guest of a Spaniard, a young professional man, and his charming and cultured wife, little more than a girl. Let me repeat some of the conversation we had. It will help to make intelligible the abyss between the upper and the lower classes and how it was fostered.

"When a little girl," she said, "I went to the convent school of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart, known as 'the congregation of the rich.' But they had two divisions, one for the poor and the other for the rich.

"I was in the division of the poor. We poor could not mingle with the rich. The rich had the exclusive use of the garden and large playgrounds and their own refectory. We were always told that the things meant for the rich were not for the poor. The rich would not speak to us and showed their disdain and contempt. The rich had many privileges. Their confessions were heard before ours and they had the privilege of standing or kneeling as they confessed whereas we poor had to kneel.

"At the church services they sat in their benches while we had to stand around at the sides. The rich would mock us, sticking out their tongues at us and making faces. We suffered, but when we complained we were chided and told that we had no right to complain as we were poor and it was, therefore, meet that we should be humble."

How can one ever expect understanding between the classes of human beings in Spain when such is the idea of Christian brotherhood and charity that has been instilled in their hearts?

This brings us to the religious phase of the situation here. A great deal of poison has been spread abroad in an effort to make people believe that this is an anti-God government having as one of its main purposes the crushing of religion. Sectarian periodicals have published and repeated that "the government has liquidated the priests." I have gone deeply into the facts—they would affect me profoundly if they were true. But I find no evidence to support the charges.

IN BARCELONA today there are living some 2,000 priests, in Madrid some 900, in other cities and towns others in proportion. I know of anarchists who saved the lives of priests, and I know of atheists who sheltered priests in their homes to guard them from harm. All this contrasts oddly with the statements which go to such extremes as affirming "not one priest remains in Madrid," or in Barcelona or some other city, as the case may be.

I am told by an investigator, himself a Catholic priest, that not more than 80 priests were killed in Madrid. That is bad enough, but they are only a fraction of many others who suffered in those days of turbulence and chaos. Those sworn to uphold the government and law and order abandoned it, turned traitors, and for some months anarchic disorder reigned until the government, fighting for its life at Madrid, could establish law and order again, as now it has done. That is the long and short of it.

The government has offered every facility for the re-establishment of religious worship. Protestant churches have been open for months. Catholic churches have not opened except for some chapels, particularly one in Barcelona, which is freely open to the public.

The government has gone strictly upon the theory that since there exists a constitutional separation of church and state, it is not for the government to open churches. Catholics, if they wish their services, must open their own churches and the government will protect them. But the sad fact must be recorded that Catholics have not yet opened churches because of systematic obstruction on the part of the clergy.

Few, if any, are sympathetic to the government even though receiving its protection. Most of them are waiting for the arrival of Franco. "They are more interested in having a pretext for murmuring against the government than in accepting its protection and good will," one of the priests loyal to the government told me.

These priests still take the view, as manifested by the Bishop of Teruel at the time of his capture, that this is a "holy war," in which the main issue is the church. It has been one of the great misfortunes of Spain that the church has insisted upon making itself the main issue.

Story Of The Supreme Court Fight.

IN WRITING "THE 168 DAYS" Joseph Alsop and Turner Catledge had the greatest political story of the present century to work on. The fight over the Supreme Court stirred the country as no other similar event in our times has done. It was rich in dramatic qualities. It was replete with the excitement of combat between terrific forces. And there are many who firmly believe that the fate of American democracy hung in the balance.

To this intense situation must be added the almost incredible confidence of President Roosevelt in his own ability to obtain what he wanted from Congress. Long after the fight should have been over, the President was found leading his discouraged forces into unnecessary and humiliating defeats. He had won the 1936 election with a landslide of votes. The sweet taste of victory dominated his thinking. Apparently he did not believe it possible for his triumph to be turned so quickly into a complete rout on such a vital issue.

It is this blithe temerity of the President which gives the story much of its believe-it-or-not aspect. Many Presidents have been whipped by their own parties in Congress. But it would be difficult to find any other instance in which a Chief Executive extended his own punishment over such a long period because of a presumptuous belief that he had a corner on public confidence. The impact of Mr. Roosevelt's naive self-assurance and the resolute crusading spirit which developed on Capitol Hill makes a story that is in many ways stranger and more fascinating than fiction.

HERE IS A TALE that will be retold many times in the history books of the future. Indeed, it has already been told many times through the newspapers and magazines. The chief value of "The 168 Days" is that it brings the whole story together in compact and interesting form and adds many episodes that were not previously known to the public.

Messrs. Alsop and Catledge have done a remarkable job of reporting. From the opening to the closing chapters of the court fight they follow the shifting front lines of battle, without missing any significant detail. There is evidence throughout the book of painstaking work, in spite of the fact that the volume must have been hastily written. It deserves a prominent place among the first-class reportorial efforts that have outgrown the news columns.

It was the purpose of Messrs. Alsop and Catledge to re-create the struggle over the court bill and to make it live again as a "sort of demonstration of the processes of American politics." Their success in that effort is attested by a sustained interest through most of the book. It is seldom dull. A crisp, straightforward style keeps the story moving from one dramatic episode to another. And its tone of objectivity lends strength to such conclusions as are drawn.

• • • •

AS HISTORY, HOWEVER, this account of the Supreme Court controversy has certain definite limitations. The authors call attention to the fact that they had few documents to draw upon. When the President's private papers become available, for example, some of their conclusions may need modification. On the other hand, they have talked with most of the participants in that historic contest. No doubt that advantage has enabled them to preserve facts which would otherwise have been lost.

The authors were obviously worried over their use of direct quotes to convey the messages that passed between various actors in this national drama. Their fears that this method might give the book a "keyhole air" are in some degree justified. For example, the late Senator Robinson is quoted as saying to "Jimmy" Roosevelt: "You tell your papa that he'd better leave this whole thing to us to get what we can out of it." No doubt a conversation conveying that thought took place. It would be interesting to know, however, what authority the authors have for putting this precise language and similar quotations into the mouth of the deceased Senate leader.

More important, if the book is to be judged as a history of the Supreme Court battle, is its preoccupation with details at the expense of broad strokes characteristic of the historian. Messrs. Alsop and Catledge have faithfully chronicled the reactions of Congress to the court bill and the driving force the President put behind it. But they give only occasional suggestions as to the significance of this clash to the country.

• • • •

IT MAY WELL BE that the fight to preserve an independent judicial system in the United States will mark the rejuvenation or decline of constitutional democracy in the United States. The authors note that the packing scheme had a profound effect upon the court. But they make no attempt to pursue the implications of that fact. Will the court henceforth have the courage to invalidate laws that are repugnant to the Constitution? Will it hereafter permit the Constitution to be undermined step by step rather than risk the ill-will of aggressive Executives? Or has the principle of independent judicial review been established beyond probability of further challenge by the resounding defeat administered the court bill of 1937?

These are some of the questions the historians will be asking as soon as time lends sufficient perspective to the recent assault upon the judiciary. At present they cannot be answered. Nevertheless, the principles which served to impale Attorney General Cummings' little scheme for six additional justices of new and younger blood stand out more clearly today than perhaps ever before. It was to those principles that the people rallied, thus strengthening the courage of Congress to resist a force that seemed irresistible.

History will appraise the court-packing plan from the viewpoint of right and wrong and in the light of its subsequent influences. Today Messrs. Alsop and Catledge are chiefly concerned with the dramatic struggle between two political forces. They have not written what we usually regard as history. But they have given us a vivid story of a real crisis in American democracy.

Younger Hawthorne

By Agnes DeLano.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, in his remembrance of things past, gives form and meaning to certain aspects of American life which our present-day enthusiasms sometimes obscure. Born, bred and rooted in New England, this son of one of our most distinguished men of letters, takes for granted certain backgrounds, traditions and viewpoints. So charmingly ingenuous is he in his conviction that New England is superior to the rest of the country, that he quite disarms a critic who might be tempted to call him smug. He recalls the old mountaineer who said to his adventure-seeking son as he bade him farewell: "What do you aim to do out thar? You'll only get fritter-minded like the outlanders." It is the dyed-in-the-wool New England temper of this book that makes it important.

Within its pages one meets plenty of New England's best people. They are all off guard, in easy attitudes, chatting with their neighbors or busy at their simple and everyday tasks. Bronson Alcott "ambles off into the woods and comes back with a bundle of fagots which he presently transforms into a fence, carefully avoiding all straight lines." The "invincible Louisa" tells a ghost-tale at her own fireside. Emerson, in a moment of Sphinx-like calm turns an angry and hysterical mob into a group of rational Concord citizens. Thoreau, at a skating party, "though grotesque and ungainly in figure and movement" performs "evolutions of the most intricate and surprising kind," proving a competence and accuracy which so many of his activities belied.

The elder Hawthorne comes to life most happily. Countless incidents, related with an affectionate precision, reveal him as the reserved, kindly and whimsical person he must have been. One of the strongest and at the same time most tender portions of the book touches upon the death of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Written in Julian Hawthorne's old age, the book handles the death-motif with the easy friendliness that maturity so naturally assumes. Fullness of life seems to have eradicated both curiosity about and fear of death, so that two or three death scenes are sketched in with a complete absence of strain or sadness. Emerson's last moments are mentioned with an almost easy reverence.

I. C. C. Refuses Eastern Rails Fare Increase

Bare Majority Of Board Denies Plea For Half-Cent Rise Per Mile.

By the Associated Press.

Eastern railroads failed yesterday in an effort to win permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase their basic passenger coach fares from 2 to 2.5 cents a mile.

A bare majority of the commission denied the carriers' request, expressing belief that increased coach fares probably would produce revenue results less favorable to the roads than the present charges.

The same six-member majority indicated, however, that it would permit increased fares for de luxe coach service if the railroads proposed them.

Commissioner Dissents.

Commissioner Frank McManamy, one of the five commission members who dissented, said of the majority opinion:

"It is my opinion that in its utter disregard for the weight of the evidence, the established principles of law, the needs of the industry, and the welfare of this country, this decision stands alone."

While the 2-cent fare has been in effect, the majority said, passenger coach service has about reached the point of paying its own way and returning a profit.

Majority's Opinion.

The majority opinion added:

"That basis should not be disturbed, especially during a period of business recession, except on a persuasive showing that a basis different from the present would result in a substantial increase in net revenue."

Shortly after the decision was announced, the Association of American Railroads reported 89 class 1 railroads, representing 82.8 per cent of total operating revenues had March operating revenues of $232,006,029, compared with $312,864,712 in March, 1937, and $370,826,059 in the same month of 1930.

Coalition of All To Battle Slump Urged by Frank

New York, April 14 (AP).—A national "collaboration of all forces regardless of party" to combat "one of the gravest economic crises in a century and a half" was urged today by Dr. Glenn Frank, the Republican Party's program chairman.

Dr. Frank, disclaiming even "so much as a chemical trace of partisan politics" in what he had to say, told the Bond Club of New York in a luncheon address that there must be "an adjournment of the bitterness of recent months."

He mentioned the Roosevelt Administration specifically but once—and that time to identify it with the "new liberalism" which he said had "gone authoritarian" and had ceased to be liberal "except in vocabulary."

Springfield, Mass., April 14 (AP).—Governmental "pump-priming" was denounced tonight by Charles R. Hook, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and of the American Rolling Mill Co. He said:

"The unbalancing, expensive governmental pump-priming process is a temporary panacea that leaves the patient worse at the end than at the beginning of the treatment."

Dr. Smith Quits As High School Executive Here

Dr. Harvey A. Smith, assistant superintendent of District schools, in charge of senior high schools, will resign July 1 to become superintendent of the Lancaster (Pa.) school system, it was learned yesterday. Dr. Smith formerly taught German in the Lancaster High School.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, said no one is yet under consideration to succeed Dr. Smith, who was promoted in 1936 from principal of Central High School.

Dr. Smith, a member of the District school system since 1929, was described by the superintendent as "a fine school officer" who "has lived up to all expectations."

A native of Pennsylvania, Dr. Smith received his bachelor of arts degree at Franklin and Marshall College in 1914, and seven years later took his master's degree at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1929 he received his Ph.D. in school administration at Columbia University.

He formerly taught Latin and mathematics at the Franklin and Marshall School in Lancaster, and Latin and German at the Chester (Pa.) High School. Subsequently Dr. Smith accepted the principalship of the Millville (N. J.) High School, where he remained for seven years before coming to Washington.

Senate Kills Bill To Curb Politics Of U. S. Workers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate defeated yesterday a proposal by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico to restrict political activities of most Federal employes. The vote was 38 to 19.

The bill would have prevented non-policy making Federal jobholders from participating in conventions nominating candidates for Federal office.

200 to Attend Session.

Roanoke, Va., April 14 (AP).—About 200 persons are expected to attend the annual meeting of the State Council of Virginia, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, which will be held May 23-25, inclusive.

President's Warning

21 American Republics Determined To Preserve Democracy From Outside Aggression, He Declares.

Peoples of the Pan American nations are determined to maintain their cherished democracy and independence in the face of any "aggression coming from outside," President Roosevelt yesterday warned a world in arms.

While the controversy on other continents has led to "tragedies whose shadows lie heavy on the world," the President pointed out that 300,000,000 citizens of the Western Hemisphere "have undertaken contractual obligations to solve these normal human differences by maintaining peace."

He described the common aims of North and South American countries as "a lasting foundation for the maintenance of an international understanding unique in the world."

Talks to 20 Nations.

Transmitted to 20 Latin-American republics by short wave radio, the President's address was delivered before the governing board of the Pan American Union, comprising Secretary of State Hull and envoys of South and Central American nations.

"The 21 American republics," President Roosevelt stated, "present proudly to the rest of the world a demonstration that the rule of justice and law can be substituted for the rule of force; that resort to war as instrument of policy is not necessary; that international differences of all kinds can be solved through peaceful negotiation; that the sanctity of the pledged word faithfully observed and generously interpreted offers a system of security with freedom."

Recalling that "all of us gained independence because our fathers were willing to sacrifice their lives and all they possessed for a great ideal," he said the Pan American countries must be prepared, if necessary, to make similar sacrifices for the preservation of their heritage.

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address yesterday to the governing board of the Pan American Union:

There could be no more fitting occasion than the present for me to greet my friends of the 20 other American republics. We have learned in this Western Hemisphere what community of interest really means. We have worked for it, created it, and we now glory in it. Properly, therefore, Pan-American Day is set aside as an annual testimony to the significance which the American family of nations has for the world.

Won't Permit Aggression.

Never was that significance greater than today. The 21 American republics present proudly to the rest of the world a demonstration that the rule of justice and law can be substituted for the rule of force, that resort to war as an instrument of policy is not necessary, that international differences of all kinds can be solved through peaceful negotiations and that the sanctity of pledged word faithfully observed and generously interpreted offers a system of security with freedom. The three hundred millions of citizens in the American republics are not different from other human beings. We have the same problems, the same differences, even the same material for controversy which exists elsewhere. Yet, we have undertaken contractual obligations to solve these normal human differences by maintaining peace, and that peace we are firmly resolved to maintain. It shall not be endangered by controversies within our family, and we will not permit it to be endangered from aggression coming from outside of our hemisphere.

This, a common objective of all of us, forms a lasting foundation for the maintenance of an international understanding unique in the world.

"Will Must Be Strong."

The American peoples, who today fortunately live as good neighbors, not only enjoy a privilege, but undertake a heavy responsibility. Fortunate in being remote from the tumult of conflicting doctrines and from the horrors of armed conflict—from the tragedies whose shadows lie heavy on the world, the American republics, nevertheless face a grave test. If our good fortune is to continue, our will must be strong.

All of us gained independence because our fathers were willing to sacrifice their lives and all they possessed for a great ideal. Some part of that duty to sacrifice rests also on us. We have progressed far along the path that leads to government of the people in the interest of all the people. Our democratic system has conferred on all of us an inestimable gift of individual liberty within the law. We are vitally concerned with preserving the high standards of international restraint and morality, which the lesson of centuries has taught is the first requirement of peaceful relationships between nations.

Confidence Is Democracy.

Now, more than ever before, we of this American hemisphere must make plain that these principles, upon which so great a civilization is founded, are vibrant, productive and dynamic. National and international law and morality are not the restraints of weaklings; they are signs of serene strength—confidence in our purpose and ability to maintain independence and democracy.

Particularly I am glad that in December of this present year representatives of all of our governments will once more assemble. This time it will be in the great capital of Peru. During these turbulent years the Inter-American conferences have come to be an instrument for bringing ever closer the relationships between our several nations. In Lima we have a renewed opportunity to counsel together. I assure you that we in the United States have found peculiarly welcome the views, the opinions, the friendly advice of the statesmen of our sister republics. Public opinion in all of our countries benefits from learning with greater frequency and in greater extent the thoughts, the desires, the needs of the peoples of the other American nations.

Ideal Is Liberty.

In constant testimony of our mutual friendship and trust is the increasing progress in communications. The North, Central and South American voices which reach us through the air are those of friends. Only a short time ago the people of the United States were enabled to hear a gracious message broadcast to them by my friend, the President of Argentina. A few days later they listened to the address delivered to them by the minister of foreign affairs of Brazil, whom we had been privileged to have in Washington as Brazil's Ambassador during the past three years. His significant words were applauded in every American home.

Our ideal is democratic liberty. Our instrument is honor and friendship. Our method is increased understanding. Our basis is confidence. So and not otherwise, in common effort we safeguard in this New World the great rights of our liberties and build our civilization for the advancement of humanity throughout the world.

U. S. And Nicaragua 'Cancel Out' Debts

By the Associated Press.

The United States and Nicaragua mutually canceled their debts to each other yesterday except for $72,000 due from the United States.

Nicaragua owed the United States $484,000 in interest and principal on a debt incurred in purchasing arms, ammunition and other military equipment between 1921 and 1927.

The United States owed Nicaragua $641,115 for a refund of income taxes paid to the United States Government by the Pacific Railway of Nicaragua, which was incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine.

Yale Head to Talk At D. C. Banquet

Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Yale Club of Washington, to be held Wednesday evening, April 27, at the Raleigh Hotel.

Announcement of plans for the annual event was made by Edward Burling, jr., '29, chairman of the banquet committee. Other members of the committee in charge of arrangements for the dinner are: Eugene Meyer, '95, president of the Yale Club of Washington; D. C. Lambert, '17, secretary; Charles G. Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Glen Echo Park, Opening for Summer Tomorrow, Reflects Acumen of Its Veteran Presiding Genius

Leonard B. Schloss, After More Than Quarter of Century, Keeps Free Amusement Center "On Top;" New Attractions Added This Year; That Convention of 1928, Mr. Hoover and Mr. Kahn; Notes.

IF on the basis of yesterday's temperatures, you feel that summer is just around the corner—probably holding a clandestine rendezvous with prosperity—that corner ought to be no farther away than tomorrow.

BELL.

I mean to say that one of the sure harbingers of the heated term in Washington is the opening of Glen Echo Park for the more or less torrid season. Tomorrow will celebrate that eagerly awaited event.

It is quite an institution that the Capital has in Glen Echo Park. It has been going on now ever since I can remember and with an ever increasing annual accretion of merit. The attractions grow constantly better, the prices remain within the closely-tied purse-strings of a majority of the populace, even in depression times, and there is an "atmosphere" about the place that appeals equally to the carefree and the punctilious amusements seeker.

This is a combination of qualities rarely encountered in an al fresco resort, especially when it is conducted on a free admission basis. I attribute the pre-eminence of Glen Echo Park to a single dominating factor. That factor is the peculiar sort of genius for this type of enterprise exercised by Leonard B. Schloss, who has devoted more than a quarter of a century to the development of this pet project of his.

Mr. Schloss—"Len" to you and me—is by way of being a bit of a real genius in his line. He has gained national recognition by the skill with which he has developed Glen Echo into one of the model amusement places of its kind in America. He has been a national officer of the Association of Open Air Parks, or whatever it is that this organization calls itself. His Glen Echo has been examined and used as a basis of planning of similar enterprises in all parts of the country by showmen of recognized standing. In a manner of speaking, Len is the "daddy of them all."

There are sound foundations for this man's eminence in his chosen profession. They are easily discernible in the manner in which Glen Echo Park is conducted year after year. This theory of operation encompasses the major matters of splendid service, efficient upkeep, a constant suggestion of newness and novelty and, above all, the implied requirement that decorum on the part of the public is essential.

I do not mean that a policeman is constantly nudging your elbow, or anything of the sort. I do mean that at Glen Echo there has been established a definite reputation for salutary amusement that only comes from careful planning. That planning has been painstakingly carried on through the years by Leonard B. Schloss and the results of his efforts should constitute the principal solace of his managerial life.

He has done an incomparably fine job and Washington should be grateful to him—as it is.

• • • •

As I say, Glen Echo Park will not be open to the public until tomorrow. The new features that will be presented, therefore, are not yet known to these eyes. They are reported to be of an enticing nature. That fabulous Crystal Pool, of course, will not be available for daily splashing until later on, when air and water temperatures are a little more kindly than they probably will be between now and May. But that pool, nevertheless, is something to be anticipated with impatience. It is probably the best equipped, most efficiently guarded and most capacious of the natatoria to be found south of New York, north of Florida or east of Hollywod in these United States.

• • • •

That paramount Sales Convention, in session at the Shoreham Hotel, to which reference was made in this space yesterday, is unique. Instead of including three or four hundred only moderately interested delegates, drawn from all branches of the motion picture industry, this tight little conclave is being confined to the key men who are primarily intrusted with the task of seeing to it that Paramount stays on the black side of the ledger—the division managers, sales managers and their immediate associates in the company's "turnover."

Consequently there will not be as much hullabaloo coming out of this conclave as there was out of the Carlton assemblage of ten years ago. For one of the few times in the history of the business, Paramount has decided to make this a strictly business convention, instead of a national joyride. The idea ought to work.

• • • •

And in speaking of the 1928 convention, in yesterday's column, we should have remembered that de luxe banquet that preceded the Washington Auditorium showing of "Wings" by one night. That was an effulgent and gastronomically perfect occasion. The principal speakers of the evening were the late Otto H. Kahn, head of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who happened to be Paramount bankers at the time, and Herbert Hoover. Mr. Kahn made one of the most subtly significant speeches I ever have heard. So did Mr. Hoover. Mr. Kahn's was all on the side—by implication—of governmental lenience toward the fiscal affairs of the cinema; Mr. Hoover's was as delicately indicative of certain obligations the Government felt itself bound to observe. It was a pretty sparring match, with both participants sharing equally in the applause of a crowd that packed the Carlton's commodious dining room. It was being bruited about that night that Mr. Hoover would be the next President of the United States. It wasn't a bad guess, back there in the spring of 1928, before the national conventions and the November elections.

• • • •

Nicholas Joy, an actor well known to Washington audiences, who plays the English literary agent in the New York company of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," coming to the National the week of April 25, may play the same part when the Warner Brothers transcribe this long-run hit into a motion picture on the West Coast. Negotiations are under way and so is a quandary for Mr. Joy.

It always has been his custom to return to his native England each year. Last summer the idea was kicked vigorously over the heart by the continued prosperity of the stage play. Now, if he goes into the picture at the end of the present tour, there goes another trip to England.

Life is like that is what I always say.

• • • •

Phil Lampkin, the fork-handed musical director at Loew's Capital Theater, is at it again. Phil plans one of his more elaborate overtures for the Easter week, beginning today. His "Easter Overture" will enlist the vocal contributions of Dianne Christenberry, wife of a major in the United States Army stationed in Washington, already known to lovers of high vocalism in the Capital. Miss Christenberry is one of society's favorite nightingales.

• • • •

When the Capital's children and their interloping adults gather on the White House grounds Monday for the annual Easter egg rolling, they will be largely indebted to the loewcal Loew organization for a deal of their entertainment. The Loew's Cadet Band will play, as it has for the past several years, Paul Gerritts will skate, Sylvia Froos will sing and Patricia Bowman will dance for their edification. Could I borrow an egg?

Voice-From-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note.

Don't be silly. You are an egg!

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 14.—Walter Wanger phoned and asked if I'd like to come over and meet Hedy LaMarr, that exotic flower from Vienna. Would I! I fairly leaped onto my car and was there in a couple of shakes. She's intrigued my interest ever since I saw her in "Ecstasy." And for the past six months I've been put off, because the studio had built a wall of mystery about her. I even invented my own bit of nonsense, an alleged interview between Hedy and Miss West. Here it is:

HEDDA HOPPER.

MISS W.—Hedy, why don't you stop all this mystery business and come and see me. I could teach you a few wrinkles.

HEDY.—But Miss West, I can't talk to anyone.

MISS W.—Listen, baby, you can show 'em, but you've got to tell 'em, too. It's all right for Garbo to keep quiet. Swedes never could talk anyway. Why, I knew one once—you know, a Swede—who never even thanked me when I nearly ran him down. You want no truck with people like that.

HEDY.—Miss West, I don't understand you.

MISS W.—Now Hedy, don't you go putting on airs with me. When I saw you in "Ecstasy" I just knew we should get together. And mind, I saw you long before Will Hays allowed the rest of America to look at you.

HEDY.—Miss West, please don't mention that picture again. I'm trying so hard to live it down.

MISS W.—Why, Hedy, honey, don't you know we all want you to live up to it. Why, you showed courage and spunk. I've tried to show that and a few other little things, too. But it's awful hard for us natives to get away with such things these days . . . Hello . . . Hello . . . Oh, shucks, she's hung up on me!

I found Miss LaMarr beautiful, alert, intelligent, eager to learn. She assumes no airs or graces. And takes direction willingly. She opened my eyes to what some of these foreign stars go through. At Metro she was being coached by one of our best, Phyllis Laughton.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

In the stout old virtue of early marriage, the Roosevelts have set a noble example for the citizens . . . When young John Aspinwall Roosevelt weds in June he will be only 22, but still a year older than the average Roosevelt's 21 on his nuptial day.

• • • •

Sir Ronald Lindsay . . . Anglophobes.

The President was 23 when he married Eleanor Roosevelt, and she was 20 . . . Anna also married at 20, and so did Elliott . . . Franklin, jr., was 21, and Jimmy was 22 . . .

Another year or two and John might have begun to be regarded as an old bachelor by his family.

• • • •

POTOMAC PIFFLE: In Washington a "little business" is defined as one with less than $1,000,000 capital . . . . And I'd thought it was one whose owner slept behind the shop while his wife sat out in front on a rocking chair . . . When a member of Congress receives a telegram demanding that he vote against Bill No. Umpty-Ump, he suspects there's skulduggery afoot; someone's been telling the voters the number of the bill.

"—dwarfs attack the White House."

The wow-of-the-week among Roosevelt stories seems to be the one about Snow White's dwarfs and the White House . . . On one day no less than 14 people tried to tell it to me. (One chap phoned Kansas City long distance, to be the first to tell it, but he was too late; his man had heard it.)

It's cleaner than most tory quips at the White House, and fun to tell a girl, because there's a catch to it, but it's not quite printable.

• • • •

Thoughtful citizens who scrutinized the list of guests at the Gridiron dinner are puzzled by the fact that Saito of Japan and Dieckhoff of Germany were the only Ambassadors honored by an invitation . . . Offhand it looks like a magnanimous gesture.

• • • •

As a graduate of a newspaper copy desk in New York, where I was the only man on the rim neither bald nor silver-haired, I am fascinated by a sentence from President Roosevelt's explanatory notes recently published. It reads:

"I think it is generally conceded that the overwhelming number of newspapers in the United States, especially the larger papers, have been more or less critical of the New Deal policies in general and of my Administration in particular."

• • • •

To any of my hard-boiled colleagues on the rim of that desk several of Mr. Roosevelt's words and phrases would have suggested some crisp questions:

"I think . . ." Don't you know?

". . . generally conceded." By whom? How generally?

". . . the overwhelming number . . ." How many?

". . . more or less critical?" Do you mean more or do you mean less? And more or less than what?

". . . policies in general." Not in particular?

• • • •

And as one-time Western city editor, I probably would have sent out a reporter to ascertain how many of the country's 2,000 daily papers are read at the White House. Probably as a reporter I should have returned with the information that the White House sees 8 or 10 daily papers, more or less.

"—which one gets promotion?"

Anonymous and confidential letters have been tipping off the Senate that there is favoritism in the Government offices . . . A pretty young girl seems much likelier to win promotion and pay than a plain elderly girl—especially if the pretty young girl is red-haired.

Plainly this calls for an Executive order directing the attention of office chiefs to the marriageability of pretty red-heads—especially when the boss isn't married—as their most logical road to promotion.

• • • •

Secretary Wallace once sent his son to Arthur (TVA) Morgan's college at Antioch, where studies alternate with hard work . . . When young Wallace went on to Iowa State College it took him almost a year to make up academic courses in which he had fallen behind.

• • • •

Around the fireside, New Dealers in Washington are divided in two camps—one argues the President should go on the air regularly—maybe once a week—to repair the breaches in the New Deal ramparts; the other argues he should stay off the air . . . Both schools are agreed that a radio speech from Warm Springs would have been better than the I-don't-want-to-be-a-dictator letter . . .

Parks Board Passes Plans For Closings

Also Approves Programs for Playgrounds, Overpasses.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved plans for playgrounds, street closings and other projects but sidestepped a study on development of East Capitol street.

William T. Partridge, consultant, was ready to submit proposals for transformation of the thoroughfare, involving the feasibility of placing the Thomas Jefferson Memorial near the Anacostia River, but commission officials said a crowded schedule necessitated a postponement.

"The East Capitol street program will be taken up at the next meeting on May 26," said Thomas S. Settle, secretary.

Southeast Plan Approved.

Approval was given acquisition of land, reported by Norman C. Brown, land purchase officer, for a new recreation center in the Southeast section. The square is opposite Buchanan School and fronts Thirteenth street, between C and D.

The Commission also indorsed a program of Lewis R. Barrett, recreation co-ordinator, for development of the Chevy Chase recreation center at Broad Branch road and Patterson street, adjoining Lafayette School.

Settle reported full settlement of the dispute between Virginia patent holders and the Federal Government over 105 acres of Roaches Run and certain portions of land adjoining the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway at Four Mile Run. A bird sanctuary occupies the former tract.

No Action.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning, presented an intensive report on the Capital's parking problem, but the commmission withheld action. Nor did it act on the parking report submitted several months ago by William A. Delano, its architect member.

One of the latter's recommendations calls for consideration of a plan to build parking lots in outlying sections of the city contiguous to public transportation lines.

Motorists would be urged to drive to the most convenient lot and take a bus or street car downtown, thereby relieving congestion in the central area.

Overpass Passed.

The commission approved construction of an overpass in the line of Taylor street northeast to eliminate the Bates road grade crossing. Approval also was given landscaping plans for the National Gallery of Art and construction of a vehicular underpass at Thomas circle.

While the commission was deferring consideration of the East Capitol street development program and its relationship to the Jefferson Memorial controversy, Secretary Ickes was reiterating that "a public auditorium for expression of free speech would be a most appropriate memorial to Jefferson."

Policeman Seizes Man Driving Away With His Own Car

Second Precinct Policeman Frank C. Hawkins was walking his beat last night when a passing car made him stop and blink his eyes. The car looked strangely like his.

Hawkins commandeered the car of E. L. Abbott, an employe of the Associated Press. Forcing the other car to the curb at Eleventh and Euclid streets, Hawkins recognized his license plate numbers, but the driver still insisted he was operating his own auto.

Wilkinson Speaks At Civic Meeting

Conservation of public and private property by pupils of the public schools, development of higher standards of conduct among pupil patrons of public carriers, correction of downward trends in high school population, and adjustment of school population because of postponement of the opening of Banneker Junior High School to September of next year, were discussed by Assistant Superintendent G. C. Wilkinson last night before a special meeting of the Federation of Civic Associations in the Garnet-Patterson auditorium.

90,000 School Children Cheer for Easter Holidays

This scene at Lafayette School, Broad Branch road and McKinley street, was a typical one yesterday when the close of classes marked the beginning of a 10-day Easter vacation for Washington school pupils. The children raced down the sidewalk, scattering thoughts of tests and study to the wind.

At synagogues throughout the country rabbis will ask help for destitute Jews of Europe to provide a haven in Palestine or elsewhere.

An added attraction for visitors was the Easter Flower Show at the Botanic Gardens, Second street between Maryland and Independence avenues northwest.

William A. Frederick, director of the gardens, estimated that through the week-end 100,000 persons would see the show, which is the largest Easter flower exhibit ever held here. At nights colored lights play on water fountains surrounded by thousands of spring flowers.

Women's Pay Hearings Will Resume Soon

Beauty Parlor and Office Workers Seek Board Rulings.

Public hearings on a minimum wage for beauty parlor employes or office workers will begin around May 15, it was disclosed yesterday.

Swamped with requests by employes in both groups, the Minimum Wage Board announced it will await further developments before scheduling either group.

The board will decide definitely, however, May 8, when the final public hearing is held on the basic rates for workers in the dry cleaning and laundry industries.

Board's Staff Short.

At the same time, it was disclosed that a scarcity of employes in the minimum wage office may hamper future wage conferences. Now that three industries have been awarded basic rates, much of the time of the employes will be in enforcement of the orders, it was pointed out. At previous conferences at least two of the four employes were present at all hearings. If the board is to keep rigid enforcement of its orders and at the same time go ahead with the conferences on other industries, more help would be needed, it was stated.

In a ruling released yesterday the board clamped down on employers in the retail trade who might be tempted to deduct from the minimum wage for meals and uniforms supplied their employes.

The order, which became effective February 14, awarded women workers a basic rate of $17 per week in the retail trade.

Rulings Settle Issue.

In another ruling the board ruled that girls who act as collection agents for stores on a commission basis must be paid the minimum wage each week, according to their experience rating.

Four other rulings were released yesterday regarding retail trade employes. These are:

Whether a girl is paid by salary or commission is not the concern of the Board, but the Board will require that $17 per week shall be paid each experienced worker.

Girls who sell photographic frames, tint photographs or do enlargements in connection with taking of photographs in 5 and 10 cent stores come under the classification of retail clerks.

Receptionists in photographic studios do not come under the retail trade but will be taken up under office workers.

Doctors Consider 'Pre-Day' Program

A special committee of the District Medical Society is still considering community medical care plans, but will make no recommendations "until something absolutely sound is arrived at," its chairman, Dr. John Reed, said yesterday.

The studies have been under way since last November, when Group Health Association, Inc., opened for business at 1328 I street northwest.

Without mentioning G. H. A., target of criticism by the medical society, Dr. Reed asserted that the committee's objective is not to promote something merely to offset the HOLC-sponsored enterprise, but to formulate a permanent pre-payment plan that will bring adequate medical care within the reach of citizens in low-income brackets.

Boys Club Fund Drive Passes $45,000 Mark

Don't Kill the 'Great Reforms' of Last Five Years, Roosevelt Pleads; Says Buying Power Fails to Keep Up With Production.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress on the business situation of the United States, follows:

The prosperity of the United States is of necessity a primary concern of Government. Current events, if allowed to run undisturbed, will continue to threaten the security of our people and the stabilty o four economc life. The National Administration has promised never to stand idly by and watch its people, its business system and its national life disintegrate. It is because the course of our economics has run adversely for half a year that we owe it to ourselves to turn it in the other direction before the situation becomes more definitely serious.

When this Administration took office it found business, credit and agriculture in collapse. The collapse had followed on the heels of overspeculation in and overproduction of practically every article or instrument used by man. During the processes of overspeculation and overproduction—in the '20s—millions of people had been put to work, but the products of their hands had exceeded the purchasing power of their pocketbooks, with the result that huge surpluses, not only of crops but also of buildings and goods of every kind, overhung the market. Under the inexorable law of supply and demand, supplies so overran demand which would pay that production was compelled to stop. Unemployment and closed factories resulted. Hence the tragic years from 1929 to 1933.

Starting in March, 1933, the Congress and the Administration devoted themselves unceasingly, not only to re-establishing reservoirs of credit, but to putting purchasing power in the hands of the consuming public and actually securing a more equitable distribution of the national income. Thus the downward spiral was stopped—and not merely stopped, but started on an upward course—a trend lasting through four years and a half.

Steady Rise Shown From 1932 to 1937.

In 1928 the national income was $80,000,000,000; in 1932 it had fallen to less than $40,000,000,000.

Since the low point of 1932, each year including 1937, has shown a steady increase in the income which the Nation produced, reflected in increased wages and salaries, in increased dividends, interest and individual's income. In 1937 the total of our citizens' income had risen to $68,000,000,000.

At the end of 1936 the efforts of the Government to aid in increasing the Nation's purchasing power and in stimulating business had become so well recognized that both the business community and the Government felt that a large measure of the Government's spending activities could be materially reduced.

But the very vigor of the recovery in both durable goods and consumers' goods brought into the picture early in 1937 certain highly undesirable practices, which were in large part responsible for the economic decline which began in the later months of that year. Again production outran the ability to buy.

There were many reasons for this overproduction. One was fear—fear of war abroad, fear of inflation, fear of Nation-wide strikes. None of these fears have been borne out. There were other causes of overproduction, and these causes differed in each industry.

The net result of these causes and ill-advised practices was a repetition, on a small scale, of what had happened in 1927, 1928 and 1929 on a much larger scale. In other words, production in many important lines of goods outran the ability of the public to purchase them. For example, through the winter and spring of 1937 cotton factories in hundreds of cases were running on a three-shift basis, piling up cotton goods in the factory and in the hands of middlemen and retailers. For example, also, automobile manufacturers not only turned out a normal increase of finished cars, but encouraged the normal increase to run into abnormal figures, using every known method to push their sales. This meant, of course, that the steel mills of the Nation ran on a 24-hour basis, and the tire companies and cotton factories speeded up to meet the same type of abnormally stimulated demand. The buying power of the Nation lagged behind.

Purchasing Power Failed to Keep Pace.

Thus by the autumn of 1937 the Nation again had stocks on hand which the consuming public could not buy because the purchasing power of the consuming public had not kept pace with the production.

During the same period prior to last autumn, the prices of many vital products had risen faster than was warranted. For example, copper—which undoubtedly can be produced at a profit in this country for from 10 to 12 cents a pound—was pushed up and up to 17 cents a pound. The price of steel products of many kinds was increased far more than was justified by the increased wages of steel workers. In the case of many commodities the price to the consumer was raised well above the inflationary boom prices of 1929. In many lines of goods and materials prices got so high that buyers and builders ceased to buy or to build.

Once more, as in 1929, the economic process of getting out the raw materials, putting them through the manufacturing and finishing processes, selling them to the retailers, selling them to the consumer, and finally using them, got completely out of balance. The Government of the United States, fearing just such an event, had issued warnings in April, 1937, against these practices of overproduction and high prices. The Federal Reserve System curtailed banking credit, and the Treasury commenced to "sterilize" gold as a further brake on what it was feared might turn into a run-away inflation.

The simple fact is that the laying off of workers came upon us last autumn and has been continuing at such a pace ever since that all of us, Government and banking and business and workers, and those faced with destitution, recognize the need for action.

Only 4 Measures Urged on Congress.

It should be noted in fairness that since January 1, 1937, the President has recommended to the Congress only four measures of major importance to the business of the country:

1. Legislation to stabilize agriculture. A comprehensive law was approved by me two months ago.
2. Legislation to end serious loopholes in our personal income tax laws. This was enacted last summer.
3. Legislation to put a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours of labor in industry, and
4. Tax legislation to remove inequities from the undistributed profits tax, especially as they affect the smaller type of business. Both this measure and the third are still under consideration by the Congress.

The record speaks for itself. No other measures affecting business have been proposed.

All the energies of Government and business must be directed to increasing the national income; to putting more people into private jobs; to giving security and the feeling of security to all people in all walks of life.

I believe that improvement in Government and business practices must go hand in hand with recovery—that they should be, and will be, a definite aid to recovery. While I do not wish in this message to overemphasize some of the needs, I do want to say that I believe that we must be definitely aware of certain of them—the elimination of future tax exempt bonds of all kinds of Government agencies; the subjecting of Government salaries and wages of all kinds to Federal and State income taxes; a serious undertaking to solve the railroad problem and the problems of monopolistic practices and price fixing. These are no new subjects; nor have I anything to add to them except the statement that their solution will help and not hurt business.

Pleads for Retention Of 'Great Reforms.'

At the same time, I must repeat what I believe the overwhelming majority of both houses of the Congress will agree to—that the Congress and the Chief Executive can ill-afford to weaken or destroy great reforms which, during the past five years, have been effected on behalf of the American people. In our rehabilitation of the banking structure and of agriculture, in our provisions for adequate and cheaper credit for all types of business, in our acceptance of national responsibility for unemployment relief, in our strengthening of the credit of State and local government, in our encouragement of housing, slum clearance and home ownership, in our supervision of stock exchanges and public utility holding companies and the issuance of new securities, in our provision for social security, the electorate of America wants no backward steps taken.

We have recognized the right of labor to free organization, to collective bargaining; and machinery for the handling of labor relations is now in existence. The principles are established even though we can all admit that through the evolution of time administration and practices can be improved. Such improvement can come about most quickly and most peacefully through sincere efforts to understand and assist on the part of labor leaders and employers alike.

The never-ceasing evolution of human society will doubtless bring forth new problems which will require new adjustments. Our immediate task is to consolidate and maintain the gains achieved.

Consumer Demand Slack at Present.

In this situation there is no reason and no occasion for any American to allow his fears to be aroused or his energy and enterprise to be paralyzed by doubt or uncertainty.

Our situation is vastly different from that which we faced five years ago. Let us use the tools already forged and laid out on the bench.

At this immediate time we suffer from a failure of consumer demand. The hoped-for reemployment of this spring is not proceeding fast enough to create an economic upturn.

Therefore, the problem calls for action both by the Government and by the people.

It cannot be disputed that the national income which was $38,000,000,000 in 1932, $68,000,000,000 in 1937, is now running at the lesser rate of about $56,000,000,000. If it can be increased to $80,000,000,000 in the course of the next year or two the whole economic picture will be different. Hundreds of thousands more people will be employed in private industry, hundreds of thousands fewer will be in need of relief, and consumer demand for goods will be greatly stimulated. I do not set $80,000,000,000 as the national income goal. It ought to rise in the next decade to more than $100,000,000,000. I want to make it clear that we do not believe that we can get an adequate rise in national income merely by investing, lending or spending public funds. It is essential in our economy that private funds be put to work and all of us recognize that such funds are entitled to a fair profit.

As citizen income rises, let us not forget that Government expenditures will go down and Government tax receipts will go up.

How, and where can, and should the Government help to start an upward spiral?

I propose to the Congress three groups of measures:

1. In the first category I place additional appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July, 1938. These will not put more money in the hands of the consuming public than we are spending in the current fiscal year, but they will prevent men and women from being thrown out of work on July 1. They will stop the spiral from continuing its downward course:

(a) I recommend an appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration, to be used during the first seven months of the next fiscal year. Such a grant is ammunition of the highest grade for attack on recession. It will not greatly increase the present rate of expenditure, but ought to be sufficient to care for the additional men and women who have come or are coming to an end of their unemployment insurance payments.

(b) For the Farm Security Administration an appropriation of $175,000,000 for the next fiscal year.

(c) For the National Youth Administration the sum of $75,000,000 to cover the full fiscal year.

(d) For the Civilian Conservation Corps the sum of $50,000,000 additional to maintain the existing number of camps now in operation.

I call your attention to the fact that these appropriations will avert the laying off of people now receiving assistance from the Federal Government.

In this same category of stopping the downward spiral, I also place the authorization recently given for the lending of money to business enterprises by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I do so because the greater part of such loans will go to businesses which are in grave danger of shutting down and throwing people out of employment. Some of the money, but, in all probability, only the smaller part of the loans, will enable businesses to employ more people or start new enterprises.

2. In the second category, the Administration proposes immediately to make additional bank resources available for the credit needs of the country. This can be done without legislation. It will be done through the de-sterilization of approximately $1,400,000,000 of Treasury gold, accompanied by action on the part of the Federal Reserve Board to reduce reserve requirements by about $750,000,000. The Federal Reserve Board informs me that they are willing to do so. These measures will make more abundant the supply of funds for commerce, industry and agriculture. By themselves, however, monetary measures are insufficient to start us on a sustained upward movement.

As a part of better administration I hope that Federal banking supervision can be better co-ordinated. In addition, I am requesting that the Securities Exchange Commission consider such simplification of regulations as will assist and expedite the financing, particularly, of small business enterprises.

3. I come, therefore, to the third category which I consider to be vital. The first two categories—maintenance of relief and the expansion of credit might prove sufficient—but in my judgment other measures are essential. You and I cannot afford to equip ourselves with two rounds of ammunition where three rounds are necessary. If we stop at relief and credit, we may find ourselves without ammunition before the enemy is routed. If we are fully equipped with the third round of ammunition, we stand to win the battle against adversity.

Amendments Asked To Housing Authority.

This third proposal relates solely to definite additions to the purchasing power of the Nation by providing new work:

(a) I ask for certain amendments to the United States Housing Authority act to permit the undertaking of the immediate construction of about $300,000,000 of additional projects. The Federal Housing Administration is prepared to increase the already mounting volume of home and apartment construction.

(b) I ask for a renewal of Public Works projects. I believe that by the expenditure of $450,000,000, and the granting of authority to loan up to $1,000,000,000 to States and their subdivisions, a vast number of well-thought-out, needed and permanent public improvements can be undertaken this summer and autumn. I believe that the aid of the Federal Government should be put in optional form—either the existing method of 45 per cent grant and 55 per cent loan, or the advancing of the whole sum as loans to States and subdivisions without interest. Under such a plan the Federal Government would assume the payment of interest and the borrowing authority would assume the payment of the principal by amortization or rental.

Under either method the ultimate cost to the Federal Government and to the States and their subdivisions is approximately the same.

It is my thought that the total ultimate out of pocket cost to the Federal Government by either or both methods should be limited to $1,000,000,000, and furthermore that no loans or grants should be made on any State or local project which cannot be started within six months of the date of the enabling legislation, and completed within a year or a year and a half from the commencement of work.

$100,000,000 Sought For Roads Bureau.

(c) I recommend the appropriation of $100,000,000 to the Bureau of Public Roads for highways in excess of the amount I have previously recommended in the budget for the fiscal year 1939, but I request that this additional amount be used only for projects which can be definitely started this calendar year.

(d) I recommend an appropriation of $37,000,000 over and above estimates for the immediate undertaking of flood control and reclamation works to be expended on projects already authorized by this or former Congresses.

(e) I recommend the appropriation of $25,000,000 additional for Federal buildings.

A summary of these recommendations falls into two categories:

1. Expenditures from the Treasury for work:

Works Progress Administration	$1,250,000,000
Farm Security Administration	75,000,000
National Youth Administration	75,000,000
Civilian Conservation Corps	50,000,000
Public Works Administration	450,000,000
Highways	100,000,000
Flood control	37,000,000
Federal buildings	25,000,000
	$2,062,000,000

2. Loans from the Treasury for work:

Farm Security Administration	100,000,000
Public oWrks Administration	550,000,000
United States Housing Administration	300,000,000
	$950,000,000

It should be noted that State and local public works undertaken on a loan basis instead of a loan and grant basis will reduce the item in the first classification and increase the item in the second classification.

Increased Income Only Way to Pay Debt.

Let us unanimously recognize the fact that the Federal debt, whether it be $25,000,000,000 or $40,000,000,000, can only be paid if the Nation obtains a vastly increased citizen income. I repeat that if this citizen income can be raised to $80,000,000,000 a year the National Government and the overwhelming majority of State and local governments will be "out of the red." The higher the national income goes the faster will we be able to reduce the total of Federal and State and local debts. Viewed from every angle, today's purchasing power—the citizens' income of today—is not sufficient to drive the economic system at higher speed. Responsibility of Government requires us at this time to supplement the normal processes and in so supplementing them to make sure that the addition is adequate. We must start again on a long steady upward incline in national income.

I have set my hope, my aim on stabilized recovery through a steady mounting of our citizens' income and our citizens' wealth. And in that process, which I believe is ready to start, let us avoid the pitfalls of the past—the overproduction, the overspeculation and indeed all the extremes which we did not succeed in avoiding in 1929. In all of this, Government cannot and should not act alone. Business must help. I am sure business will help.

We need more than the materials of recovery. We need a united national will.

We need to recognize nationally that the demands of no group, however just, can be satisfied unless that group is prepared to share in finding a way to produce the income from which they and all other groups can be paid. Unjust claims defeat themselves. You, as the Congress, I, as the President, must by virtue of our offices, seek the national good by preserving the balance between all groups and all sections.

Capacity Limited By Co-poeration Lack.

We have at our disposal the national resources, the money, the skill of hand and head to raise our economic level—our citizens' income. Our capacity is limited only by our ability to work together. What is needed is the will.

The time has come to bring that will into action with every driving force at our command. And I am determined to do my share.

The responsibility for making this national will effective rests on every individual, whether in the Government or in industry, or in finance, or in labor, or in the professional fields. Every man and woman in the United States has the great privilege of making this will productive. And the beneficiary will be the whole of the American people.

Certain positive requirements seem to me to accompany the will—if we have that will.

There is placed on all of us the duty of self-restraint. We still rely on personal responsibility—a responsibility guided by a common conscience. That is the discipline of a democracy. Every patriotic citizen must say to himself or herself that immoderate statement, appeals to prejudice, the creation of unkindness, are offenses not against an individual or individuals, but offenses against the whole United States.

Use of power by any group, however situated, to force its interest or to use its strategic position in order to receive more from the common fund than its contribution to the common fund justifies, is an attack against and not an aid to our national life.

Declares Hate Alone Fosters Dictatorship.

Self-restraint implies restraint by articulate public opinion, trained to distinguish fact from falsehood, trained to believe that bitterness is never a useful instrument in public affairs. There can be no dictatorship by an individual or by a group in this Nation, save through division fostered by hate. Such division there must never be.

Amid the voices which now seek to divide group from group, occupation from occupation, section from section, thinking Americans must insist on common effort in a common endeavor and a common faith in each other. Let every business man set out to use his strength of mind and heart and his confidence in his fellow man and his country. Let every labor leader find not how work can be stopped but how it can be made to proceed smoothly, continuously and fairly. Let every public official consider that his task is to use his authority so that the service he renders is adapted to curbing abuses and helping honest effort. Let every one of us work together to move the life of the nation forward.

Calls for Tolerance To Save Democracy.

We, a successful democracy, face a troubled world. Elsewhere schools of thought contend that democracy is doomed to failure. They tell us that free speech and the free exchange of views will destroy democracies. My conviction on the contrary is that the United States retaining free speech and a free exchange of views can furnish a dynamic example of successful government, provided the nation can unite in practical measures when the times call for united action. The driving force of a nation lies in its spiritual purpose, made effective by free, tolerant but unremitting national will.

In the Western Hemisphere the good neighbor policy has so strengthened the American republics that a spiritual unity in our relations now prevails. Can that good neighbor message be accepted and practic d in our national life?

If we accept that high and splendid road this free democracy will give successful answer to the fears and questionings which today trouble the minds and souls of men and women the world over.

Mrs. Roosevelt Receives Easter Lilies From Bermuda

Easter lilies from the people of Bermuda were presented to Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday by Mrs. Harry R. Slack, of Baltimore (left), as her daughter, Elizabeth, 4, looked on. The flowers were flown from Bermuda to Baltimore as a gift of Sir Reginald Hildyard, the governor, and Lady Hildyard. Mrs. Slack is president of the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland.

Text of 'Fireside Chat' to Nation on Spending

Five months have gone by since I last spoke to the people of the Nation about the state of the Nation.

I had hoped to be able to defer this talk until next week because, as we all know, this is Holy Week. But what I want to say to you, the people of the country, is of such immediate need and relates so closely to the lives of human beings and the prevention of human suffering that I have felt that there should be no delay. In this decision I have been strengthened by the thought that by speaking tonight there may be greater peace of mind and the hope of Easter may be more real at firesides everywhere, and that it is not inappropriate to encourage peace when so many of us are thinking of the Prince of Peace.

Five years ago we faced a very serious problem of economic and social recovery. For four and a half years that recovery proceeded apace. It is only in the past seven months that it has received a visible setback.

And it is only within the past two months, as we have waited patiently to see whether the forces of business itself would counteract it, that it has become apparent that government itself can no longer safely fail to take aggressive Government steps to meet it.

This recession has not returned us to the disasters and suffering of the beginning of 1933. Your money in the bank is safe; farmers are no longer in deep distress and have greater purchasing power; dangers of security speculation have been minimized; national income is almost 50 per cent higher than in 1932; and Government has an established and accepted responsibility for relief.

Realizes Many Persons Have Lost Their Jobs.

But I know that many of you have lost jobs or have seen your friends or members of your families lose their jobs, and I do not propose that the Government shall pretend not to see these things. I know that the effect of our present difficulties has been uneven; that they have affected some groups and some localities seriously but that they have been scarcely felt in others. But I conceive the first duty of Government is to protect the economic welfare of all the people in all sections and in all groups. I said in my message opening the last session of Congress that if private enterprise did not provide jobs this spring, Government would take up the slack—that I would not let the people down. We have all learned the lesson that Government cannot afford to wait until it has lost the power to act.

Therefore, I have sent a message of far-reaching importance to the Congress. I want to read to you tonight certain passages from that message, and to talk with you about them.

In that message I analyzed the causes of the collapse of 1929 in these words: "Over-speculation in and over-production of practically every article or instrument used by man . . . millions of people had been put to work, but the products of their hands had exceeded the purchasing power of their pocketbooks . . . Under the inexorable law of supply and demand, supplies so overran demand which would pay that production was compelled to stop. Unemployment and closed factories resulted. Hence the tragic years from 1929 to 1933."

I pointed out to the Congress that the national income—not the Government's income but the total of the income of all the individual citizens and families of the United States—every farmer, every worker, every banker, every professional man and every person who lived on income derived from investments—that national income amounted, in the year 1929, to $81,000,000,000. By 1932 this had fallen to $38,000,000,000. Gradually, and up to a few months ago, it had risen to a total of $68,000,000,000—a pretty good comeback from the low point.

Production Outran Ability to Purchase.

I then said this to the Congress:

"But the very vigor of the recovery in both durable goods and consumers' goods brought into the picture early in 1937 certain highly undesirable practices, which were in large part responsible for the economic decline which began in the later months of that year. Again production outran the ability to buy.

"There were many reasons for this over-production. One was fear—fear of war abroad, fear of inflation, fear of nationwide strikes. None of these fears have been borne out.

". . . Production in many important lines of goods outran the ability of the public to purchase them. For example, through the winter and spring of 1937 cotton factories in hundreds of cases were running on a three-shift basis, piling up cotton goods in

New Numbers Are Presented At Night Clubs

Troika Offers Brilliantly Costumed 'Othello' and Mind Reader.

By Chanticleer

Opera season opened this week at the Russian Troika with "Othello"—brilliantly costumed and executed, under Beba Prozenka, the new director of shows. Also at the Troika is Khan Kashau, the man with the X-ray eyes who is able to tell you all sorts of things about yourself.

Enters and Borgia are at the Shoreham. Terping and gyrations is the description of the dance. Also in the Blue Room are Mary Burton, the singing blonde who looks ike Mae West and sings like Sophie Tucker, and Albernice, who deals in black magic.

Milbourne Christopher, who produced a rabbit out of thin air on the White House lawn a couple of years ago (much to the amazement of Mrs. Roosevelt and her grandchildren), has returned to Washington and opens at the Pall Mall Room next Monday.

Theon, maitre d'hotel at Wardman Park Hotel, is making extensive preparations to celebrate the end of Lent tomorrow night in the Metronome Room with the assistance of Paul Kain and his boys.

Peter Borras, erstwhile song writer and Washington's number one host was surprised at the enthusiam with which his rhumba was accepted last week. Johnny Shaw's orchestra used it as the feature on the Friday Spanish night program at the Madrillon.

Joseph Hesse is the name of the genial host that you met when you visited the Shar-Zad at the Carlton.

Tax Conferees Firm on Capital Gains Clause

House, Senate Representatives at Odds on President's Demand.

A deadlocked congressional conference committee on taxes last night was in agreement on only one thing—to "fight it out" at once on the controversial corporation and capital gains tax features of the new revenue bill.

Conferees decided not to pass over these pivotal tax bill provisions, after intervention by the President in behalf of the House tax measure met unyielding opposition from Senate conferees.

The Senate bill repeals the undivided profits tax and imposes a flat 15 per cent on long-term capital gains. The House, with Presidential backing, seeking a 16 to 20 per cent undivided profits tax and a graduated tax on capital gains.

Senate conferees, as a unit, are opposing the President's demands and standing by the overwhelming vote in the Senate for their bill. If any yielding is to be done on these key provisions, they have insisted, it must be done by the House.

After yesterday's conference adjourned, with nothing accomplished, Chairman Robert L. Doughton called a meeting of Democratic members of his Ways and Means Committee. A rule of "secrecy" was imposed, but one member said they decided to "stand 100 per cent behind House conferees."

Mrs. Roosevelt Calls Isolation Theory 'Stupid'

The theory of isolation is "one of the most stupid ideas" in circulation today, Mrs. Roosevelt told 400 students and faculty members of American University last night.

"It is a very pleasant thought," the First Lady remarked, "that we can draw a little circle around our country and live to ourselves, but we in America might as well realize that we are going to feel the impact of everything that happens in every other nation."

Mrs. Roosevelt reported that on her recent transcontinental tour she found "a dangerous complacency among the American people."

"We always think that the problems of the rest of the world do not concern us," she said, "and then war is upon us before we know it. It is true that we are more fortunate than other nations and may have a little more time, but if that is going to put us to sleep then we are going the same way we have before."

Continuing on an ominous note, she declared that "we may all be wiped out" unless urgent international problems are swiftly and peacefully adjusted.

At heart, other peoples are no more war-like than Americans, she contended, but behind their policies lie economic realities, leading to a mood of despair.

"They feel they have nothing to lose, that life as it is isn't much worth living anyway," she asserted.

America's role in the search for world appeasement lies somewhere between isolation and active alliance with the democratic powers, Mrs. Roosevelt indicated in answer to a question from the floor.

In a parable of "Group One, Two and Three"—presumably America, France and Great Britain—she said that "all the groups desired a peaceful solution of these problems, but each insisted on its own particular peaceful solution . . . Co-operation between the democratic nations is more complicated than it appears on the surface."

At the conclusion of an open forum after her address, she excused herself "to get back home and hear my husband speak on the radio." Mrs. Roosevelt's speech followed the initiation of six seniors into the College Honor Society.

Text of President's Fireside Chat to Nation on Spending

Chat Text

the factory and in the hands of middlemen and retailers. For example, also, automobile manufacturers not only turned out a normal increase of finished cars, but encouraged the normal increase to run into abnormal figures, using every known method to push their sales. This meant, of course, that the steel mills of the Nation ran on a 24-hour basis, and the tire companies and cotton factories speeded up to meet the same type of abnormally stimulated demand. The buying power of the Nation lagged behind.

"Thus by the autumn of 1937 the Nation again had stocks on hand which the consuming public could not buy because the purchasing power of the consuming public had not kept pace with the production.

"During the same period . . . the prices of many vital products had risen faster than was warranted . . . In the case of many commodities the price to the consumer was raised well above the inflationary boom prices of 1929. In many lines of goods and materials, prices got so high that buyers and builders ceased to buy or to build.

". . . the economic process of getting out the raw materials, putting them through the manufacturing and finishing processes, selling them to the retailers, selling them to the consumer, and finally using them, got completely out of balance.

Appeals for Increase In National Income.

". . . The laying off of workers came upon us last autumn and has been continuing at such a pace ever since that all of us, Government and banking and business and workers, and those faced with destitution, recognize the need for action."

All of this I said to the Congress today and I repeat it to you, the people of the country tonight.

I went on to point out to the Senate and the House of Representatives that all the energies of Government and business must be directed to increasing the national income, to putting more people into private jobs, to giving security and a feeling of security to all people in all walks of life.

I am constantly thinking of all our people—unemployed and employed alike—of their human problems of food and clothing and homes and education and health and old age. You and I agree that security is our greatest need—the chance to work, the opportunity of making a reasonable profit in our business—whether it be a very small business or a larger one—the possibility of selling our farm products for enough money for our families to live on decently. I know these are the things that decide the well-being of all our people.

Therefore, I am determined to do all in my power to help you attain that security and because I know that the people themselves have a deep conviction that secure prosperity of that kind cannot be a lasting one except on a basis of business fair dealing and a basis where all from top to bottom share in prosperity, I repeated to the Congress today that neither it nor the Chief Executive can afford "to weaken or destroy great reforms which during the past five years, have been effected on behalf of the American people. In our rehabilitation of the banking structure and of agriculture, in our provisions for adequate and cheaper credit for all types of business, in our acceptance of national responsibility for unemployment relief, in our strengthening of the credit of State and local government, in our encouragement of housing, slum clearance and home ownership, in our supervision of stock exchanges and public utility holding companies and the issuance of new securities, in our provision for social security, the electorate of America wants no backward steps taken.

Says There's No Need To Become Fearful.

"We have recognized the right of labor to free organization, to collective bargaining, and machinery for the handling of labor relations is now in existence. The principles are established even though we can all admit that, through the evolution of time, administration and practices can be improved. Such improvement can come about most quickly and most peacefully through sincere efforts to understand and assist on the part of labor leaders and employers alike.

"The ever-increasing evolution of human society will doubtless bring forth new problems which will require new adjustments. Our immediate task is to consolidate and maintain the gains achieved.

"In this situation there is no reason and no occasion for any American to allow his fears to be aroused or his energy and enterprise to be paralyzed by doubt or uncertainty."

I came to the conclusion that the present-day problem calls for action both by the Government and by the people, that we suffer from a failure of consumer demand because of lack of buying power. It is up to us to create an economic upturn.

"How and where can and should the Government help to start an upward spiral?"

I went on to propose three groups of measures and I will summarize the recommendations.

First, I asked for certain appropriations which are intended to keep the Government expenditures for work relief and similar purposes during the coming fiscal year at the same rate of expenditure as at present. That includes additional money for the Works Progress Administration; additional funds for the Farm Security Administration; additional allotments for the National Youth Administration, and more money for the Civilian Conservation Corps, in order that it can maintain the existing number of camps now in operation.

These appropriations, made necessary by increased unemployment, will cost about a billion and a quarter more than the estimates which I sent to the Congress on the third of January.

Freeing of Gold Hoard Held Insufficient.

Second, I told the Congress that the Administration proposes to make additional bank reserves available for the credit needs of the country. About one billion four hundred million dollars of gold now in the Treasury will be used to pay these additional expenses of the Government, and three-quarters of a billion dollars of additional credit will be made available to the banks by reducing the reserves now required by the Federal Reserve Board.

These two steps taking care of relief needs and adding to bank credits are in our judgment insufficient by themselves to start the nation on a sustained upward movement.

Therefore, I came to the third kind of Government action which I consider to be vital. I said to the Congress:

"You and I cannot afford to equip ourselves with two rounds of ammunition where three rounds are necessary. If we stop at relief and credit, we may find ourselves without ammunition before the enemy is routed. If we are fully equipped with the third round of ammunition, we stand to win the battle against adversity."

The third proposal is to make definite additions to the purchasing power of the nation by providing new work over and above the continuing of the old work.

First, to enable the United States Housing Authority to undertake the immediate construction of about three hundred million dollars projects.

Second, to renew a public works program by starting as quickly as possible about one billion dollars worth of needed permanent public improvements in States, counties and cities.

Third, to add one hundred million dollars to the estimate for Federal aid highways in excess of the amount I recommended in January.

Fourth, to add thirty-seven million dollars over and above the former estimate of sixty-three million dollars for flood control and reclamation.

Fifth, to add twenty-five million dollars additional for Federal buildings in various parts of the country.

In recommending this program I am thinking not only of the immediate economic needs of the people of the Nation, but also of their personal liberties—the most precious possession of all Americans. I am thinking of our democracy and of the recent trend in other parts of the world away from the democratic ideal.

Unemployment Called Peril to Democracy.

Democracy has disappeared in several other great nations—not because the people of those nations disliked democracy, but because they had grown tired of unemployment and insecurity, of seeing their children hungry while they sat helpless in the face of government confusion, government weakness, through lack of leadership in government. Finally, in desperation, they chose to sacrifice liberty in the hope of getting something to eat. We in America know that our own democratic institutions can be preserved and made to work. But in order to preserve them we need to act together, to meet the problems of the Nation boldly, and to prove that the practical operation of democratic government is equal to the task of protecting the security of the people.

Not only our future economic soundness but the very soundness of our democratic institutions depends on the determination of our Government to give employment to idle men. The people of America are in agreement in defending their liberties at any cost, and the first line of that defense lies in the protection of economic security. Your Government, seeking to protect democracy, must prove that Government is stronger than the forces of business depression.

History proves that dictatorships do not grow out of strong and successful governments but out of weak and helpless ones. If by democratic methods people get a government strong enough to protect them from fear and starvation, their democracy succeeds, but if they do not, they grow impatient. Therefore, the only sure bulwark of continuing liberty is a government strong enough to protect the interests of the people, and a people strong enough and well enough informed to maintain its sovereign control over its government.

We are a rich Nation; we can afford to pay for security and prosperity without having to sacrifice our liberties into the bargain.

In the first century of our republic we were short of capital, short of workers and short of industrial production, but we were rich in free land, free timber and free mineral wealth. The Federal Government rightly assumed the duty of promoting business and relieving depression by giving subsidies of land and other resources.

Thus, from our earliest days we have had a tradition of substantial government help to our system of private enterprise. But today the government no longer has vast tracts of rich land to give away and we have discovered that we must spend large sums to conserve our land from further erosion and our forests from further depletion. The situation is also very different from the old days, because now we have plenty of capital, banks and insurance companies loaded with idle money; plenty of industrial productive capacity and several millions of workers looking for jobs. It is following tradition as well as necessity, if Government strives to put idle money and idle men to work, to increase our public wealth and to build up the health and strength of the people—and to help our system of private enterprise to function.

People's Income Rose in Five Years.

It is going to cost something to get out of this recession this way but the profit of getting out of it will pay for the cost several times over. Lost working time is lost money. Every day that a workman is unemployed, or a machine is unused, or a business organization is marking time, is a loss to the Nation. Because of idle men and idle machines this Nation lost $100,000,000,000 between 1929 and the spring of 1933. This year you, the people of this country, are making about $12,000,000,000 less than last year.

If you think back to the experiences of the early years of this Administration you will remember the doubts and fears expressed about the rising expenses of Government. But to the surprise of the doubters, as we proceeded to carry on the program which included Public Works and Work Relief, the country grew richer instead of poorer.

It is worthwhile to remember that the annual national people's income was $30,000,000,000 more in 1937 than in 1932. It is true that the national debt increased $16,000,000,000, but remember that in this increase must be included several billion dollars worth of assets which eventually will reduce that debt and that many billion dollars of permanent public improvements—schools, roads, bridges, tunnels, public buildings, parks and a host of other things meet your eye in every one of the 3,100 counties in the United States.

No doubt you will be told that the Government spending program of the past five years did not cause the increase in our national income. They will tell you that business revived because of private spending and investment. That is true in part, for the Government spent only a small part of the total. But that Government spending acted as a trigger to set off private activity. That is why the total addition to our national production and national income has been so much greater than the contribution of the Government itself.

In pursuance of that thought I said to the Congress today: "I want to make it clear that we do not believe that we can get an adequate rise in national income merely by investing, lending or spending public funds. It is essential in our economy that private funds be put to work and all of us recognize that such funds are entitled to a fair profit."

As national income rises, "let us not forget that Government expenditures will go down and Government tax receipts will go up."

The Government contribution of land that we once made to business was the land of all the people. And the Government contribution of money which we now make to business ultimately comes out of the labor of all the people. It is, therefore, only sound morality, as well as a sound distribution of buying power, that the benefits of the prosperity coming from this use of the money of all the people should be distributed among all the people—at the bottom as well as at the top. Consequently, I am again expressing my hope that the Congress will enact at this session a wage and hour bill putting a floor under industrial wages and a limit on working hours—to insure a better distribution of our prosperity, a better distribution of available work, and a sounder distribution of buying power.

Recalls Land Grants Of Earlier Decades.

You may get all kinds of impressions in regard to the total cost of this new program, or in regard to the amount that will be added to the net national debt.

It is a big program. Last autumn in a sincere effort to bring Government expenditures and Government income into closer balance, the budget I worked out called for sharp decreases in Government spending.

In the light of present conditions those estimates were far too low. This new program adds $2,062,000,000 to direct Treasury expenditures and another $950,000,000 to Government loans—and the latter sum, because they are loans, will come back to the Treasury in the future.

The net effect on the debt of the Government is this—between now and July 1, 1939—15 months away—the Treasury will have to raise less than $1,300,000,000 of new money.

Such an addition to the net debt of the United States need not give concern to any citizen, for it will return to the people of the United States many times over in increased buying power and eventually in much greater Government tax receipts because of the increase in the citizen income.

What I said to the Congress in the close of my message I repeat to you.

"Let us unanimously recognize the fact that the Federal debt, whether it be $25,000,000,000 or $40,000,000,000, can only be paid if the Nation obtains a vastly increased citizen income. I repeat that if this citizen income can be raised to $80,000,000,000 a year the national Government and the overwhelming majority of State and local governments will be 'out of the red.' The higher the national income goes the faster will we be able to reduce the total of Federal and State and local debts. Viewed from every angle, today's purchasing power—the citizens' income of today—is not sufficient to drive the economic system at higher speed. Responsibility of Government requires us at this time to supplement the normal processes and in so supplementing them to make sure that the addition is adequate. We must start again on a long steady upward incline in national income.

Declares Business Must Aid Government.

. . . "And in that process, which I believe is ready to start, let us avoid the pitfalls of the past—the overproduction, the overspeculation, and indeed all the extremes which we did not succeed in avoiding in 1929. In all of this, Government cannot and should not act alone. Business must help. I am sure business will help.

"We need more than the materials of recovery. We need a united national will.

"We need to recognize nationally that the demands of no group, however just, can be satisfied unless that group is prepared to share in finding a way to produce the income from which they and all other groups can be paid . . . You, as the Congress, I, as the President, must by virtue of our offices, seek the national good by preserving the balance between all groups and all sections.

"We have at our disposal the national resources, the money, the skill of hand and head to raise our economic level—our citizens' income. Our capacity is limited only by our ability to work together. What is needed is the will.

"The time has come to bring that will into action with every driving force at our command. And I am determined to do my share.

. . . "Certain positive requirements seem to me to accompany the will—if we have that will.

"There is placed on all of us the duty of self-restraint . . . That is the discipine of a democracy. Every patriotic citizen must say to himself or herself, that immoderate statement, appeals to prejudice, the creation of unkindness, are offenses not against an individual or individuals, but offenses against the whole population of the United States . . .

"Self-restraint implies restraint by articulate public opinion, trained to distinguish fact from falsehood, trained to believe that bitterness is never a useful instrument in public affairs. There can be no dictatorship by an individual or by a group in this Nation, save through division fostered by hate. Such division there must never be."

Finally I should like to say a personal word to you.

I never forget that I live in a house owned by all the American people and that I have been given their trust.

Tries to Remember Problems Are Human.

I try always to remember that their deepest problems are human. I constantly talk with those who come to tell me their own points of view—with those who manage the great industries and financial institutions of the country—with those who represent the farmer and the worker—and often with average citizens without high position who come to this house. And constantly I seek to look beyond the doors of the White House, beyond the officialdom of the National Capital, into the hopes and fears of men and women in their homes. I have travelled the country over many times. My friends, my enemies, my daily mail bring to me reports of what you are thinking and hoping. I want to be sure that neither battles nor burdens of office shall ever blind me to an intimate knowledge of the way the American people want to live and the simple purposes for which they put me here.

In these great problems of government I try not to forget that what really counts at the bottom of it all, is that the men and women willing to work can have a decent job to take care of themselves and their homes and their children adequately; that the farmer, the factory worker, the storekeeper, the gas station man, the manufacturer, the merchant,—big and small—the banker who takes pride in the help he gives to the building of his community—that all these can be sure of a reasonable profit and safety for the savings they earn—not today nor tomorrow alone, but as far ahead as they can see.

I can hear your unspoken wonder as to where we are headed in this troubled world. I cannot expect all of the people to understand all of the people's problems; but it is my job to try to understand those problems.

I always try to remember that reconciling differences cannot satisfy everyone completely. Because I do not expect too much, I am not disappointed. But I know that I must never give up—that I must never let the greater interest of all the people down, merely because that might be for the moment the easiest personal way out.

I believe we have been right in the course we have charted. To abandon our purpose of building a greater, a more stable and a more tolerant America, would be to miss the tide and perhaps to miss the port. I propose to sail ahead. I feel sure that your hopes and your help are with me. For to reach a port, we must sail—sail, not lie at anchor, sail, not drift.

Labor Board Aide Asks Annual Wage

Cleveland, April 14 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board's regional director proposed today that Akron rubber companies espouse a guaranteed annual minimum wage for their "permanent" workers.

James P. Miller, regional director, placed a 15-point program for labor-management peace in the major industry of the rubber capital before representatives of the B. F. Goodrich Co. and C. I. O.'s United Rubber Workers. It was to be presented later, presumably, to the Firestone and Goodyear companies.

Monograms, Geometric Designs Are Featured This Season in Decoration of Easter Eggs

By Jean Green.

Brightly colored eggs, fluffy yellow chicks, and pink-eared rabbits are dear to the heart of every child. These are symbols that have endured through the centuries and are just as much the vogue today as then.

The style of decorating the eggs does change, however. This year the style tends toward monograms and geometric designs. There are still on the markets the different types of dyes. Some are on cards and need only be floated on water in order to dissolve. Others must be heated before the color transfer is effective. The eggs boiled in the dyes have a more true color, and are very effective.

The coloring this year, however, does not stop with dyes. Seals, bits of cotton, cardboard, stars, doilies and stickers are used in dressing them for the Easter parade. Gold and silver stars, dots in various colors, small red hearts, flower seals such as forget-me-nots and tulips and linen reinforcements will give you a great variety of material for working out interesting and clever designs.

Eggs Are On Display.

Many of the stores downtown have these eggs on display so that when you make purchases you can also gain inspiration for your assortment. If desired, these seals can be used with the dyes. In this case put the pickers on the egg, then drop into the hot dye mixture. Take it out quickly, dry and remove the sticker. This leaves a white design against the colored background. Unless perfectly fresh eggs are used, it is sometimes difficult to use dyes for successful coloring. This difficulty is overcome by using the stickers. The bunny is made by pasting pink paper for ears, using a white paper color, and white ring reinforcements for eyes. Amusing is the word for all decorations.

If you are rabbit hunting, then you are in luck at downtown stores. All sorts of interesting rabbit characters are exhibited. Some of them are attached to nests, others are guarding over cellophane-covered baskets. Many are good to eat.

Eggs on Easter come to the table in many different forms. Not only are the decorated eggs used for table decorations but candy, ice cream and dessert eggs will be much in evidence. The dessert for the Easter dinner can be a large ice cream egg fashioned of contrasting flavors, covered with rich chocolate and desorated with a fluting of whipped cream.

Candy eggs for the "Easter hunt" can be made at home. These eggs can be tinted in pastel colors. This tested recipe can be used in preparing simple candies. A chocolate covering and a fondant garnish will give them a professional appearance.

Candy Easter Eggs.

2 cups of sugar
½ cup of water
¼ cup of white corn syrup
1 teaspoon of vanilla
1 package of cocoanut
Cake coloring.

Boil the sugar, water and corn syrup to the soft ball state (238 degrees). Remove from fire and let it stand until lukewarm. Add the coloring. Add vanilla and cocoanut and shape as Easter eggs. Place on waxed paper to harden. For a variety of "Easter eggs" use plain fondant and tint in pale green, delicate pink, green, lavender and yellow.

Children on Easter morning will find a special thrill in an egg hunt. If several children take part, it is fun to make it a special game by giving out score cards and baskets, and attaching a special evaluation to the eggs of different colors. Whether candy or dyed eggs are used, the colors can still be counted. Yellow eggs can count 15, for example, blue eggs 10, green eggs 8, and varicolored eggs 5. A small prize can be awarded the most successful boy or girl.

MARY LUCRETIA and Donald Detwiler, Arlington, Va., believe the Easter bunny will like this egg decorated in mottled effect. Plain dyes, seals and calico colors are used on others shown in the basket.

Market Tips

Ham is the attractive buy at many stores this week. Discovered at one food specialty shop is a red wine with a robust full flavor that will stand up against the flavor of ham. It is a red wine, similar to burgundy and is called Cotes du-Rhone.

* * * *

A colorful appetizer for Easter breakfast is made by cutting grapefruit in half, removing the "meat" in sections, discarding all white membrane, and refilling with the grapefruit and whole washed strawberries with stems still attached. The grapefruit can be prepared the night before, but add the strawberries only a few minutes before serving.

* * * *

Several downtown stores are featuring a new gadget for liquefying fruits and vegetables. This new mixer reduces fresh or canned fruits and vegetables to almost invisible particles, thus "making drink of foods and food of drinks." Pineapple, bananas, peaches, berries, apples, oranges, can be transformed into beverages or used for ice creams and sherbets. The gadget is motor driven and will operate on either AC or DC current.

* * * *

Many vegetables and fruits are available for the week-end menus. New potatoes are plentiful. Spring cabbage is coming in from the Gulf States. The first new Bermuda onions are coming in from Texas. Green peas, snap beans and celery and lettuce are abundant. Spinach is especially plentiful and inexpensive. Carrots coming in from the Imperial Valley in California makes April a big month for this vegetable. Asparagus has passed the early luxury price stage and is now available for families with more modest food budgets.

Pretzels like crackers that are the size of peanuts are the latest innovation for parties. They have a zesty flavor and are quite the rage for the impromptu parties and midnight supper snacks.

Lamb Recipes Offer New Suggestions

Traditional Easter Dish Was Subject of Post Contest.

TRADITIONALLY lamb is the favored Easter meat. It comes to the market in greater quantities at this time and is delicious when well prepared. Possibilities for serving it were presented in great variety by Post readers last week. Recipes entered in the contest refuted the rule that only by roasting and broiling could lamb be made delicious. Many recipes were submitted for curries and lamb stews that ranked high in zest and flavor.

The winning recipe glorifies the popular leg of lamb. It is served with a special plum jelly sauce that takes the place of the traditional mint. The recipe was submitted in the contest by Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, 7 Belle Grove road, Brooklyn Park, Baltimore, Md.

A menu suggested for the colorful Easter dinner includes an appetizer salad, Hollyhock House roast lamb with plum jelly sauce, new potatoes with paprika butter, spinach souffle and ends with a cinnamon mint custard.

HOLLYHOCK HOUSE ROAST LAMB.

Rub into the meat following mixture:

1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon minced parsley

Sear in a hot oven 500 degrees for 20 minutes, then reduce temperature to 375 degrees.

Mix together:

¼ bay leaf
¼ cup minced carrot
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons flour, blended with ¼ cup of butter.

Spread over the meat after the first 20 minutes of searing and roast, allowing 20 minutes to the pound. Pass plum jelly sauce at the table.

PLUM JELLY SAUCE.

1 glass plum jelly
1 teaspoon of flour
1 tablespoon orange juice
¼ teaspoon of mustard
Dash of mace
3 tablespoons pineapple juice

Melt the plum jelly (about ¾ cup). Add the orange juice and mace. Blend together flour, mustard and pineapple juice and simmer all ingredients together for five minutes. Serve either warm or cold.

A lamb fricassee with seasoned dumplings makes an economical dish for Easter. A variety of vegetables add flavor and nutritive value. The recipe, the second prize winner, was submitted by Mrs. Elease Wheeler, 1911 R street northwest. The dish as given here is a one-dish meal.

LAMB FRICASSEE.

Small shoulder of lamb, cut for stew.
½ cup chopped celery
½ green pepper chopped fine
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce
1 medium onion
1 quart water
1 small carrot
Salt and pepper as desired

Dust the lamb cubes lightly with flour, salt and pepper as needed, fry in hot fat, add the vegetables, cover and simmer for about 1 hour—add more water if needed.

Drop small dumplings into the sauce pan, cover and cook 12 minutes. Thicken the gravy and serve. Vary by adding a little poultry seasoning to the dumpling mixture.

Lamb cooked Caucasian style is preferred by Mrs. Julia B. O'Connell, 53 Todd Place northeast. Instead of pan broiling as described in this recipe, the dish can be prepared over the open fire or under the broiler. It has a flavor you won't forget. This recipe wins third prize.

CAUCASIAN SHASLICK.

Cut 2 pounds shoulder of lamb into squares about an inch thick. Sprinkle the squares with salt and pepper. Place in a bowl, covering it with ¼ cup vinegar and ¼ cup water. Add a chopped onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and if desired 1 garlic bud, chopped. Let stand about 2 hours. Then take out the meat, drain well and place lamb on a large wooden skewer or toothpick. Next to the lamb place a thin square of bacon, then another square of lamb, and continue till the toothpick or skewer is filled with meats. Cook in a hot skillet with a small amount of butter until deliciously brown and well done. If meat is prepared on toothpicks, plan to have two for each serving if large skewers are used, one for each serving.

Recipe Contest

Favorite dishes for food sales and community hall gatherings will win prizes in this week's Post Recipe Contest. A salad, pie, or cake that you are doubly sure will impress is the answer. To win, write clear directions for preparation of the dish and mail to Jean Green, The Post food editor, before April 23. Five cash prizes will be awarded. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three of $1 each.

Curry such as might have been served by the rajah wins the fourth award in the week's recipe contest. The aromatic curry powder gives character to this dish. Serve it with the cooked white rice. Mrs. F. J. Simmonds, 1612 North Hartford street, Arlington, Va., will be mailed a check for this recipe.

LAMB CURRY AND RICE.

1 cup white rice
1 sliced, peeled large onion
1 tablespoon shortening
1 tablespoon curry powder
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup of cold, leftover gravy
1 cup of water
3 cups of diced, cooked, leftover lamb
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten

Cook rice in boiling, salted water, drain and keep hot. Saute onion in shortening until tender (not brown). Combine curry powder, flour and gravy in saucepan. Add water and heat. Next add onions and lamb, heat well. At last moment before serving stir egg yolk into the meat mixture. Serve with it chutney or green tomato relish, minced fried bacon and grated coconut over each serving of lamb and rice.

Mrs. Toby Traveek, 1915 K street northwest, Apartment 306, says her husband had tired of the taste of lamb until she served this dish, the fifth prize winner. The distinctive flavor of the lamb is hardly recognizable when marinated.

MARINATED LEG OF LAMB.

Leg of lamb or shoulder
1 teaspoon of prepared mustard
1 teaspoon of celery salt
1 teaspoon of allspice
1 tablespoon of brown sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
2 cups of vinegar
2 cups of bread crumbs
¼ cup of chopped celery
1 tablespoon of chopped parsley

Hollyhock House Roast by Mrs. Edwards Wins Prize.

1 medium-sized onion
½ teaspoon of sage
½ teaspoon of salt
¼ cup of chopped nuts

Purchase the lamb and have it boned and pocketed for stuffing. Marinate the meat in a solution of prepared mustard, celery salt, allspice, brown sugar, salt and vinegar. Allow the meat to soak in the marinate for 24 hours, turning it several times.

Prepare the stuffing by blending the bread crumbs, chopped celery, chopped parsley and chopped onion. Use soft bread crumbs if you prefer a soft, sticky dressing. Vary the amount of onion used according to taste. Add the sage, salt and pepper and chopped nuts. ("I make my dressing of crumbs made from leftover biscuits," says Mrs. Traveek. Add milk enough to make the dressing of the consistency you desire. Work the dressing with the hands until it is well mixed. Stuff into the pocket of the meat and roast in an open pan at about 375 degrees until tender, or about 30 minutes per pound.

White Corn Meal Used in Dumplings

Delicious When Cooked in Chicken Stock.

Many a Southern mammy is famous for her chicken and dumplings. She has her prize recipes, which are given out only to close friends. White cornmeal is the basis of many of these recipes. This recipe will rival that of any cook who has scraped onion and parsley to impart a special flavor. The cornmeal is made into a smooth, thick mush, then blended, shaped and cooked in the boling chicken stock for ten minutes.

Cornmeal Dumplings.

1 cup white cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
1 1-3 cups boiling water
½ teaspoon scraped onion
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
2 eggs, beaten slightly.

Add salt to cornmeal and pour slowly into the water, stirring constantly. Remove at once from fire and stir to a smooth, thick mush. Cool. This part may be done in advance. When ready to finish boiled dinner, add eggs and mix thoroughly. Divide dough into 12 equal portions and drop onto a floured board. Shape into cakes, oblongs or balls, coating the surface with flour. Drop into the boiling stock (in chicken kettle) and cook gently for ten minutes. Remove at once. Serve with the vegetables and whole chicken.

To serve, arrange on platter as for roast chicken, arranging the vegetables as a garnish.

The Chapon Potie Perigordine was the piece de resistance. The capon was stuffed and truffled and served with tiny green peas and Frenched potatoes. The Dogs of Friendship China was used as service plates, and spring bouquets of flowers were at each table.

A refreshing spring salad dish was the feature at the luncheon given Good Friday at the Hay-Adams House in honor of Senior Henrique Medina, portrait artist, visiting the Argentine Legation. The salad was bulky enough to satisfy a man's appetite, yet light for the woman on a diet.

Hot Cross Buns 'Must' on Menu Of Good Friday

Come Good Friday and there must be hot cross buns on the menu. These little cakes carry the mark of the cross. They are really symbols of an ancient belief that dates back even before the days of Christianity.

The worshipers of Diana, goddess of the moon, believed the moon was divided into four parts. In honor of this goddess, they ate the bread marked with a cross at their public sacrifices. This was during the early Greek and Roman days.

The early Christian church adopted the custom of serving the hot bread with the cross as one of their symbols. Today it is a "must" on the menu.

The buns are made from a yeast dough. If only a few are needed, the rest of the dough used may be kneaded and flavored to make a coffee cake. Many variations can be made from the foundation dough. The buns may be shaped, brushed with beaten egg and sprinkled generously with rock sugar before baking. They can be iced with uncooked frosting and sprinkled with chopped pecans or walnuts. Or the buns can be shaped and brushed with a honey topping made by creaming together ¼ cup of butter, 2-3 cup of confectioner's sugar, 1 egg white and 2 tablespoons of honey, warmed.

Easter Time May Be Saved By Roast Meat

Dishes Quick in Preparation Leave More Minutes to Greet Guests.

The Easter feast brings an end to Lent and means a day of rejoicing the world over. It is the day in which to renew family ties and strengthen friendships.

A gay, colorful menu that does not take too long to prepare seems to give a satisfactory solution to this dinner. If a roast is chosen for the main dish, much time is saved. Lamb is traditional, but ham is also good. The cold, sliced meat can be served for a buffet supper or for a quickly prepared lunch for unexpected guests.

There is a wide array of food on the market and deciding upon a menu for the Easter dinner is a matter of picking and choosing. The Home Economics Bureau, Department of Agriculture, recommends a roast shoulder of lamb with a mint stuffing, new potatoes with parsley, buttered asparagus or spinach, a spring salad bowl, and lemon sherbet and sponge cake.

Eggs Au Fait.

The table for the Easter dinner should be decorated in green and white and green and yellow. The centerpiece can be a basket of eggs or a mammoth candy egg filled with favors for all members of the family.

The dessert for the meal is very important. If you have a centerpiece of eggs or even of flowers, let candy rabbits and chicks stage a gala parade around them. These can be quickly prepared from cooky dough or from uncooked fondant. In both cases the design is made with the cooky cutter.

Daffodil Bavarian Cream.

1½ tablespoons of granulated gelatin
¼ cup of cold water
1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup fresh Florida orange juice
Grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup of whipping cream

Soften gelatin in cold water, place over hot water to dissolve. Add sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, orange juice and grated orange rind. (Use those deep golden Valencias now in the market.) Blend thoroughly. Place bowl in pan of ice water and stir until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into mold and place in refrigerator to chill. When set, unmold on a serving dish.

Easter Party Cake.

2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 cup mashed banana (2 to 3 bananas)
½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup heavy cream, whipped and sweetened
3 bananas, sliced

Sift together the flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Add milk to mashed banana. Rub the shortening to a creamy consistency with the back of a spoon. Stir the sugar, a few tablespoons at a time, into the shortening and continue stirring after each addition until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Add flour mixture, alternately with combined milk and bananas, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Stir in flavoring. Pour into greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 30 minutes or until cake is done. Cool. Put cool layers together with whipped cream and sliced banana. Spread whipped cream over top of cake and garnish with sliced banana. Makes two 8-inch layers.

Easter Nests.

14 apricot halves
2 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
6 baked tart shells

Place marshmallows in saucepan. Add 2 apricot halves which have been mashed thoroughly with a fork. Heat over low flame, folding over and over until marshmallows are about half melted. Then remove from flame and continue folding until mixture is smooth and spongy. Let stand until lukewarm. Meanwhile, beat egg whites until they hold a peak. Add sugar slowly, while beating constantly, then add salt. Carefully fold marshmallow mixture into the egg mixture. Pipe, or place a spoonful of the meringue in the bottom of each tart shell, then place two apricot halves, round side up, over the meringue, and decorate the edges and top with additional meringue. Place 3 inches below hot broiler flame (550 degrees F.) and brown for one-half minute.

Dunkards Take Own Hymns to Folk Festival

Maryland Sect Will Sing Old, Peculiarly-Keyed Devotional Tunes.

Among religious groups represented at the fifth annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8 will be the Dunkards of Maryland.

Wearing traditional costumes of the Church of the Brethren, a choir of more than 20 from Easton, under the Rev. Harry A. Ziegler, will sing century-old hymns from shape-note song books.

This will be the first time Dunkards have been represented on a national festival program, although their influence on the folk life of their States is undisputed.

Their appearance will be sponsored by various civic interests in the Easton area, in co-operation with Miss Louise de Ginther, WPA supervisor of music on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and Miss Mayme A. Collins, WPA supervisor of adult education.

Hymns which will be sung are "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past," "Again the Lord of Life and Light," and "Behold a Stranger at the Door."

The Church of the Brethren has 170,000 communicants in America today and traces its origin back to the pietistic movement in Germany in the latter seventeenth century.

Born out of a protest against the formalism of a state church and actuated by the desire to live close to the Word of God, the church has never formulated or accepted a written creed.

The first members came to the United States in 1719, settling in Germantown, Pa. Their early leaders, including Peter Becker and Alexander Mack, jr., were prolific hymn writers. Their music, which is still in use, is written on three staves, with F sharp in the first space instead of on the highest line as we now use it.

Tickets for the festival, sponsored by the Washington Post Folk Festival Association, are now on sale. Each of the six programs will present a cross-section of the folklore of the Nation, although each will be different.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Defender's Discard Makes Slam Bid Successful.

Dear Mrs. Culbertson: I send you the inclosed hand which I held last night, in order to get your opinion, in the first place, as to whether my bidding was sound and, in the next place, whether discards made by North and South hands were reasonable, as, of course, the hand was only successful on account of the discards of clubs.

East, dealer.

	♠ J 4 3 ♡ J 9 6 2 ◇ Q 10 4 ♣ K 10 4
♠ K 10 2 ♡ 7 5 3 ◇ 8 7 6 2 ♣ 9 7 3	West East North South	♠ A Q 9 7 ♡ A K ◇ A K J 9 ♣ A Q 6
	♠ 8 6 5 ♡ Q 10 8 4 ◇ 5 3 ♣ J 8 5 2

"Sitting in the East, I had the deal, and upon picking up the hand, immediately bid six notrump; I bid this because I realized that if I made a two demand bid my partner's conventional answer must be the negative reply of two notrump, and as I intended that the bidding should not stop until at least a small slam in notrumps had been arrived at, I thought it better to preempt the bid in that contract in order that the lead come up to, and not through, my hand, and that the opponents should not have the benefit of seeing my hand exposed.

"In the play, South led the four of hearts. North played the jack and I won with the ace. I played to the king of spades in the West hand and immediately finessed the jack of diamonds. Being successful, I then played all the diamonds and spades. South discarded two clubs and one heart, and North first a heart and then a club. I then led the five of clubs, which was taken with the ten spot in the North hand. North returned a heart, and the club king fell on the ace, making the queen good, so that the bid was successful.

"North could have defeated the hand by discarding two hearts instead of a heart and a club, but was probably fooled by my play of the ace of hearts on the first trick.

"Under the circumstances, do you think that North's discards were proper, or that he should have held on to three clubs?

Yours truly,
A. N. M., Toronto."

Although there is sound logic in my correspondent's statement that he did not wish his own hand to be exposed as dummy, thus making it easier for the defenders to gauge their problems, I still cannot approve the tremendous opening bid of six notrump. Three notrump would have been strong enough.

Now, as to the defense: North's discard of a club was inexcusable. His partner had opened a fourth-best heart which immediately stamped declarer with only two hearts. North should have welcomed the opportunity to discard hearts and to keep his clubs. It is interesting to note, however, that even if North discarded perfectly, South also would have to be careful. At the tenth trick declarer would have left the heart king and the A-Q-6 of clubs. If South had reduced to the blank jack of clubs and kept three hearts, declarer could fulfill his contract by cashing the heart king, thus robbing North of his only safe exit card, then leading the queen of clubs. Dummy's last three cards would be the three clubs, and North would find himself end-played. Thus, perfect discarding was required on the part of both defenders—North to hold three clubs and a heart, and South to hold only two hearts and the guarded jack of clubs.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

By Scott Hart.

Fantasy.

In this very real world, a man, withal, might reflect. For most of life's pleasure come through anticipation, the actual realization always being the stark thing that it is. And it is well and pleasurable now to reflect on the forthcoming investigation of Senator Ellender's charges of petty tyranny in the bureaus, that dimples and a wistful look—not to speak of come-hither looks—bring more promotions than merit. The hour of the investigation draws nigh . . .

And, in anticipation, it would seem to move something as follows (but of course, anticipation and reality are two different things):

THE COMMITTEE—How many charges of petty tyranny have you?

ELLENDER—Almost as many as there are girls not so beautiful in the service.

CHIVALROUS MEMBER of the committee—Then you have none at all, for they all are beautiful. The committee will hear no such talk, suh!

ELLENDER—You misunderstand me. My charges involve only the beautiful—and as I meant to say, they all are beautiful. It is the degree of beauty that has caused the petty tyranny. For example, a girl with two dimples, a dimple in the cheek and a dimple in the chin, has more chance of being promoted from filing clerk to administrative assistant than, say, a girl with only a dimple in the chin. The fact that the latter girl is a better filing clerk makes no difference. The girl with the two dimples gets the better job.

THE COMMITTEE (in unison)—This is indeed a revelation. Do you think, Senator, that this has widespread implications—that even Congressmen, in the future, might have to deliver patronage on the basis of dimples and red hair rather than on vote-getting capabilities? This thing, indeed, might revolutionize the political practices of us all.

ELLENDER—I wish to confine my remarks and allegations only to those who have attained positions in the service. I contend that the chiefs prefer two dimples to one, that a red head will go farther with Uncle Sam, employer, than any brunette. The blondes are even placed in disadvantage!

A COMMITTEEMAN (aghast)—Even the blondes! I'd promote a blonde every time!

ELLENDER—Gentlemen, I protest. On the committee is a man who thinks in line with the bureau chiefs. He, too, would promote a blonde. I insist on impartial auditors—a group of men who are above dimples and the color of hair. I'd as soon be trying to get a hearing before the bureau chiefs themselves!

ANOTHER COMMITTEEMAN—Let's keep our poise, gentlemen. Has homemaking anything to do with the promotions of women in the Federal service. For example, if one girl can bake a better coconut pie than another—would she be favored?

ELLENDER—I have no such charge, at the moment. All of my charges concern dimples and appealing looks, the color of hair and Southern accents. I argue that a Southern girl can get further by drawling dea . . . rie, than an efficient Northern girl can get by attention and application to duty, and . . .

A COMMITTEEMAN—All of my constituent girls are from the West; this is discrimination, I call it! you've got something there, Senator!

ELLENDER—I know I have. I have the case of all the girls who are not so pretty, and . . .

THE CHIVALROUS COMMITTEEMAN—But they are all beautiful, I tell you, and the committee won't hear . . .

ELLENDER—It's time for lunch. Besides, we are losing ourselves in coconut pie and chivalry. Everything's been discussed but telephone numbers, while wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN—After lunch, we will take up the girls with everything, those with two or three dimples and the right outlooks on life. We'll yet make this Federal service the place for any chief—pardon me, I mean any working girl.

ELLENDER—'Tis only too true. Only heaven will protect a working girl!

Middleburg Cup Chase Renewal Set Tomorrow

Former Governor Peery Will Be Among Notables Who Will Attend 18th Running of Turf Classic; Many Parties Planned.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Sporting society from Washington, Baltimore and New York will flock to the Virginia hunting country tomorrow for the eighteenth annual renewal of the famed Middleburg Cup Steeplechase. The former Governor of Virginia, George C. Peery and Mrs. Peery, plan to be in a party going over from Richmond for the turf classic that will thrill thousands of horse lovers. Chances are, also that the new Governor, James H. Price, will be among the spectators.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Colonial homes in and around Middleburg are to be open to scores of week-end visitors and hunt-race fans. Mrs. Merriam Curtis, who recently returned to her home here after several days in New York, will be the week-end guest of Mrs. George Sloane at Whitehall Farm, Warrenton, and will attend the Middleburg event tomorrow.

The largest social affair on the hunt country calendar for the week-end is the luncheon to be given tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands and Miss Charlotte H. Noland at Benton Farms, the home of the Sandses. From the house guests will go directly to the great Glenwood Course on the Sands estate for the first event, the Sunnybank—one and one-half miles over hurdles, for a $250 purse—which will get under way at 2 o'clock. Luncheon guests will include officials of the race and many friends, among them Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who will spend the week-end at the Sands' estate.

Among others who have parties lined up tomorrow and the next day for week-end visitors to the races are Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin of New York who will give a luncheon tomorrow; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, who will have a small company to tea in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Ivor G. Balding, of Long Island; Mrs. Ayres Starr of New York and Middleburg, who will entertain at cocktails following the races; Mr. and Mrs. William Doeller, who will have a large luncheon on Sunday at their Orkean, Va., home, and who will have among their house guests for the week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Du Bose of Washington.

Visiting Canadian To Talk on Radio

Mrs. Elena Murdock Skaith, popular Canadian guest of Mrs. William N. Doak, wife of the Secretary of Labor in the Hoover Administration, will give some of her impressions of the United States and Canada, her homeland, in a radio interview with Mary Mason at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. A dynamic person, who is well informed on economic and political trends, she has had experience as a broadcaster, so what she has to say should be of wide interest here.

Over a luncheon table at the 1925 F Street Club yesterday, she spoke of her recent trip to Williamsburg, which she found "surprisingly interesting." She will be off to Monticello tomorrow and hopes to see a number of other historic places before returning to her home in Ottawa. Yesterday afternoon, she called at the Canadian Legation. The Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, has known her for many years and is a close friend of her father.

Earhart Foundation Headed by Mrs. Davis

Mrs. James J. Davis started out yesterday afternoon as hostess at a tea and ended up by being chairman of the Washington committee for the Amelia Earhart Foundation. The meeting at which she was elected followed a tea given in her Massachusetts avenue home. Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, and Mrs. Hannah Jones, sister of Senator Davis.

In the meeting afterward Ernest B. Chamberlain, regional director of the Amelia Earhart Foundation presided and outlined the aims of the foundation, which was organized to establish a "living memorial for the only woman to make a successfull trans-Atlantic solo flight. The memorial will take the form of scholarships in science and social service and an endowed woman's building at Thiel College, from which Miss Earhart was graduated, and with which her grandfather was connected.

Among those who attended the meeting yesterday, at which Mrs. Davis was elected chairman of the Washington committee, were Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Howard F. Rough, who was formerly Miss Helen MacCloskey, widely known aviator and close friend of Miss Earhart; Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, Miss Earlene White, Dr. Gould Wickey, Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the Newspaper Women's Club, of which Miss Earhart was an associate member; Miss Charles Ormond Williams, the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Dr. Mary E. Markley, Mrs. George Sanford Holmes, Miss A. Barbara Wiegand and Mrs. Gould Wickey. Mrs. Roosevelt to Rest a Day Before Children's Fete Monday

Crowded White House Easter Schedule Lets Up Tomorrow; Will Attend Services at Arlington National Cemetary.

Mrs. Roosevelt's crowded Easter schedule will let up tomorrow, and she will have a day of rest before resuming a calendar of entertaining that will include a children's party at the White House Monday afternoon.

She said yesterday at her press conference the event would be for her grandchildren, Sara and Kate Roosevelt, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, and also for William Bonner Roosevelt, their cousin, provided he stays at the White House through Monday. His mother, Mrs. Curtin Winsor and her husband will come by Washington on Sunday, returning from a visit to the South, and they may take young William on home with them that evening.

Mrs. Roosevelt's next press conference will take place at 10:30 o'clock on Monday. She has moved up the time half an hour in order to make an early tour of the south lawn, which will be the scene of the traditional egg-rolling. Also, on Monday, the First Lady will entertain at luncheon members of the Fortnightly Club of New York, an organization started by her aunts, Mrs. William Sheffield Cowles and Mrs. Douglas Robinson.

Full Calendar Through Today

Mrs. Roosevelt's day was filled with events yesterday. Following her press conference, she lunched with the 74th Congressional Club. Several groups were received for tea and others will be tea guests today. This evening Mrs. Roosevelt will speak at American University at 8:30 o'clock.

Miss Bauer Talks On Housing Projects

Miss Catherine Bauer, director of research and information of the United States Housing Authority, attended Mrs. Roosevelt's conference yesterday and explained some of the plans now under way for low-cost housing projects to be carried out in Austin, Tex., Charleston, S. C. New Orleans, La., Syracuse, N. Y. and Youngstown, Ohio. She drew a comparison between rental rates for the Housing Authority dwelling units and those built under PWA in several cities, and pointed out that the proposed project will reach proportionately more of the lower income group than low-cost dwellings provided by municipalities in England, Germany or the Scandinavian countries.

It would seem few persons are better prepared than Miss Bauer to draw such a comparison. Her book, "Modern Housing," based on her observations and research throughout Europe as well as in this country was a complete and authoritative account of low-cost living quarters here and abroad a few years ago.

Incidentally, her desire to be an architect led to her becoming a full-fledged housing expert. After graduating from Vassar College, she attended Cornell University and later went to Europe to continue her study of architecture. While there, she wrote an article on the architecture of modern housing in Frankfort, Germany, and won a $1,000 prize. Later, she became executive secretary of the Labor Housing Conference, which position she held at the time her book was published in 1935.

Good Citizenship Trip To Bring Pilgrims Today

Girls From All States in Union Will Arrive as Guests of Daughters of American Revolution; Some Already in Capital.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Good Citizenships Pilgrims from all the States in the Union will be in Washington today for their visit as guests of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. A few early arrivals reached the Capital yesterday; the largest contingent, a party of 20 from the West and Middle West, will be in this morning, and by evening all of the girls will be here, ready for the round of sight-seeing and entertainment.

Mrs. Raymond Krinbell, of Winetka, Ill., national chairman of good citizenship, came ahead of them, after arranging a day's program for those who stopped over in Chicago on their way East. The girls were taken on a sight-seeing trip there which included luncheon at Marshall Fields with a corsage at the place of each guest.

Among those coming from the West this morning will be the Colorado pilgrim, Lila M. Elliott, of Mosca, who had not seen a high building or ridden on a trolley car until she visited Colorado Springs a month ago. Almost without exception, the girls are honor students as well as leaders in school activities. Mrs. Krinbell yesterday had a tone of pride in her young pilgrims as she picked out a few and named their achievements.

* * * *

Maxine Sower, who comes from Idaho, is secretary of the school band and orchestra, vice president of the student body, president of the Girls' Pep Club, on the staff of the school paper, a member of the National Honor Society, and has a long list of other distinctions. She is president of the Booster Club, member of the basketball team, prominent in other school club activities and was a page at the State D. A. R. convention. Charlotte Newell, of California, won the State oratorical contest and the regional speaking contest, and is president or vice president of six clubs.

Right down the list of pilgrims there are similar honors listed for each girl.

This evening their first visit will be to the D. A. R. buildings. In Memorial Continental Hall they will be greeted by Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, and members of her staff, and taken through the museum, where Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, editor of the National Historical Magazine, will show them her collection of dolls and tell interesting stories about them.

This evening, Mrs. Thomas Hardy Seay, District of Columbia good citizenship chairman, will entertain the girls at her home. Helen Marie Bell, the District pilgrim, will speak on a radio program at 2 p. m.

* * * *

The schedule calls for early rising tomorrow—6:45, with breakfast at 7:30, cherry blossoms at 8, the Washington Monument, Department of Justice, Folger Library and Supreme Court before luncheon; a tour of historic places and a visit to the White House, where they will be received by Mrs. Roosevelt at 3. Tomorrow night they go to the Pan American Building, where Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general, will receive them. On Sunday there is church, luncheon with the president general and more sight-seeing, and Monday Congress and the opening of the Continental Congress.

Each girl will find in her room on her arrival a box of candy with a card bearing the hand-painted flower of her State.

The week-end is practically given over to the pilgrims except for the State regents' meeting this morning and the luncheon of the National Officers Club at 1 o'clock today.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Women to Know D. C. Facts

Wives of members of Congress should make it their business to know about things in the District of Columbia, Mrs. Roosevelt told the Seventy-fourth Club yesterday at the luncheon in her honor at the Mayflower. "In a democracy, we can't escape responsibility for what democracy stands for and for the success of democracy," she declared. "It is our duty to know our own environment wherever we are."

The First Lady began her talk with a discussion of the important part women of England have played in public affairs for many years—first by their keen interest in their husbands' campaigns and later as members of Parliament and public officials. Things which have been done in this country within the last two years were done in England 25 years ago, said Mrs. Roosevelt without referring specifically to the changes. They have been done quickly there because of the influence of women in government, she said.

She reminded those of her audience of what they might do in informing themselves on local conditions. She asked how many had visited Freedmen's Hospital, and told, as she had at the luncheon of the Seventy-third Club the week before, of the conditions which had been permitted to exist there because of lack of adequate appropriations.

The Marine Band Orchestra provided music during the luncheon and, following it, a program was presented by Diane Christenberry, soprano, and Marie MacQuarrie, harpist. Miss MacQuarrie played harp solos and also accompanied Miss Christenberry. Both were in costumes suggesting the Gay 90's era.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a violet dress with a gold thread through it, trimmed with large buttons edged with rhinestones. Her broad-brimmed black hat had two little bouquets of flowers as its trimming. She was greeted on her arrival by the president of the club, Mrs. Hugh Peterson, who wore a flowered chiffon frock and a small brown hat with a veil. At her left at the luncheon table was Mrs. Emmett O'Neal, a member of the board of the club, who wore a black dress with a white yoke and a smart off-the-face black hat. Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, director of the Woman's Division of the WPA was a guest and was in a costume of royal blue, her sailor hat matching her jacket suit. Mrs. A. L. Ford sat beside Mrs. Woodward, wearing a beige suit. Among other guests at the head of the table also were Mrs. Joe Schultz, wife of the mayor of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Byron Scott, of the club.

Mt. Holyoke Unit Honors Dr. Ham

Members of the Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association of Washington entertained at a dinner at the Sulgrave Club last night for Dr. Roswell Gray Ham, president of the institution. He spoke on the subject "How Large Is a Small College?"

The element of "smallness" in a college can be attained by the adjustment of the faculty to the number of students in such a way as to afford them individual attention, said Dr. Ham. A large college may be broken up into smaller units giving all the advantages of a small school with the added ones afforded by a larger institution.

He declared it was a mistake to assume that one set scheme of higher education should apply to schools for both men and women. Women's colleges, he pointed out, were started on a scheme imitative of men's and many of them left out of their reckoning the fact that fully 50 per cent of their graduates would marry rather than go into business life.

Mrs. McFall Kerbey, president of the alumnae association, presided at the dinner. On the committee assisting her in arrangements for the affair were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Justice Roberts; Miss Helen Demond, Miss Jean Dean Cole, of Mount Vernon Seminary; Miss Mabel Turner, headmistress of National Cathedral School; Mrs. Harold Krafft, Mrs. C. W. Lowry, Miss Eleanor Neill, and Miss Gertrude Bruyn, field secretary of the college.

Washington business and professional men honored Dr. Ham at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Roberts was chairman of the committee on arrangements and Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Corcoran Thom, and Seth Richardson acted as hosts. Frank Clayton Myers of New York, a trustee of Mount Holyoke College, was present.

Among those attending the dinner last evening were: Col. and Mrs. E. B. Gregory, Mrs. Frank Hall, Miss Evelyn Shoob, Mrs. F. L. Weaver, Mrs. E. J. Rowell, Miss Mary Latimer Ruhl, Mrs. Marian S. Beckwith, Miss Emily Smith, Miss Alice Allen, Miss Mary Stephens, Miss Lois May, Miss Jeannetta Grant, Miss Mabel Turner, Miss Eleanor Gifford, Mrs. I. W. Hill, jr., Dr. and Mrs. Philip Bail, Miss Josephine Cochran, Mrs. H. L. Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Hynson, Miss Catherine Blackeslee, Mrs. Eugene Stevens, Miss Dorothy Vastine, Mrs. Gladys Berenguer, Mrs. Helen Sweet Lenning, Miss Helen Demand, Miss Harriet Pearson, Miss Eleanor Neill, Miss Katherine Baden and Miss Helen Goodner.

SIX CAMP FIRE GIRLS, chosen for outstanding local work in conservation and for making 25-year plans for the future, yesterday received honors from President Roosevelt at the White House. The ceremony marked the last day of their National Conservation Rally which opened at the Hotel Mayflower Tuesday.

Lester F. Scott, national Camp Fire Girls executive, came from New York City to be present and the rest of the 60 Camp Fire Girl delegates stood in the President's office to watch. Among the girls who received honors was Dorothy Dyson, of Des Moines, Iowa, president of the girls' local council, who has started them on making a relief map of Polk County at the request of J. N. Darling, president of the National Wildlife Federation. Naomi James, of Wichita Falls, Texas, was another. She has been planting wildflowers and shelterbelt trees on the advice of soil conservation experts, and is working with the girls on her conservation committee to make a 25-year plan for this.

Helene Robertson, of Oklahoma City, and her local Camp Fire sisters have done bird conservation work. They put up 200 feeding stations for winter and summer in the city parks and plan to continue this on a long-term basis. Genevieve Oswald, of Buffalo, said they were in the path of one of the greatest bird trails in the world. The girls seek to encourage the annual return of the Baltimore Oriole, the redwing blackbird and all small songbirds and have planned a 25-year campaign for planting berry trees and shrubs to feed them.

Shirley Tuggle, of Seattle, has already started with her city Camp Fire sisters on a project to plant 87 varieties of juniper tree along the canal that leads from the lake to the Puget Sound. The sixth and last Camp Fire Girl to meet the President was Marge Wenning, of Cleveland, representing work to restore the bank of the Grand River outside Cleveland.

Headline Is Corrected on Peyser Story

Facts in News Story Did Not Warrant Word 'Scored.'

In the March 19 issue of The Post, a story was published on this page stating that the national defense committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution expressed "amazement at the reports in the press that Col. Julius Peyser had represented the Civil Liberties Union in defense of the pickets at the German Embassy and Austrian Legation." The headline on this story read "D. A. R. Group Scores Peyser on Picket Case."

The facts in this story, which were correct, did not justify the headline placed on the story, and there was no statement in the article indicating or suggesting that Col. Peyser had been "scored."

The Post is glad to correct the impression which may have been given by this erroneous headline.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Correspondent Advises 'Nervous, Worried Persons' to See Psychiatrists, Not Diagnosticians.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am one of your admirers, but, as often happens in such circumstances, in writing to you for the first time I am taking a critical tone. I have so often been impressed by the clear sanity of your views on most subjects that I winced on reading your reply to "Man Reader," published April 11. You told him that he probably needed "overhauling by a first-class diagnostician," and then went on to say, "if you need psychiatric assistance . . . the diagnostician will tell you so."

• • • •

Do you really believe the average diagnostician will send a neurotic patient to a psychiatrist prior to the time that the patient—desperate and milked of most of his money—revolts against the bluffing and suave promises that constitute the stock-in-trade of the diagnostician when dealing with neurotic patients?

• • • •

My own bitter experience is to the contrary. I was in a "run-down condition" and had hay fever. I went to a diagnostician of the highest repute. He found nothing specific wrong with me; nothing that he could do anything about. Did he admit the truth; namely, that he could do nothing to help me? Did he send me to a psychiatrist? He did neither of these things. Instead, he stalled me along, piling up bills for me with allergists, nose and throat men, X-ray men, etc.

• • • •

In desperation, I changed to another diagnostician of the very best reputation. He carried me along in much the same way. Finally, almost by accident and as a last resort, I went to a psychiatrist. He recognized that all the physical symptoms flowed from a neurosis, and effected a cure, although his difficulty was multiplied by the fears and despairs created in my mind by the specialists who had owlishly suspected me of having six or eight different kinds of ailments.

• • • •

The simple truth is that in cases of this sort medical men are in many instances blind to the facts; or, if they happen to suspect that functional and physical ailments are the result of neurosis, they haven't the courage or decency to admit that somebody else might succeed where they have failed. So they contrive to make the patient feel that the fault is his. They tell him, with an air of great wisdom, that he is in a "run-down condition." Do you realize what weasel words these are? Usually they amount to a confession of failure, without the patient, however, realizing it. He continues to dangle on the hook.

• • • •

It too often happens that the "run-down condition" is due to neurosis, which may lower blood pressure and basal metabolism, get the glands out of kilter and cause most any kind of symptom. In 1935 Fortune Magazine published an illuminating article on neurasthenia, stating that next to the common cold it is the most prevalent ailment in the United States.

• • • •

I have heard it said on excellent authority, though privately, of course, that four-fifths of doctors' patients are neurotic and should be treated by psychiatrists. Of course, when one thinks of what would happen to the average doctor's practice if he sent four-fifths of his patients to somebody else, it is possible to see a ray of light on the question of why doctors are so reluctant to give neurotic patients the benefit of the best services science affords them.

• • • •

Your fine column interests me primarily because you give special attention to the psychological aspects of the problems your correspondents write about, and this is certainly the way to get at the root of things in such problems. Furthermore, I think your psychology is almost invariably sound. But I do think it is regrettable for you to suggest that worried and nervous persons take their troubles to doctors. It has been the way of tragedy for too many already. Why not tell them to go to psychiatrists first?

• • •

I rather suspect you are one of those who believe that "a sound body makes a sound mind." As I understand it, this is the approach of most doctors and of most psychiatrists. I am speaking, of course, of neurotic and not of insane patients. In view of my own experience, I'll string along with the small group who believe that the mind is controlling and the body is of secondary importance.

C. E. H.

Co-operation Exists.

DEAR C. E. H.: Whereas I am gently chided, in this instance, for suggesting to many "nervous and worried persons" that they "take their troubles to doctors," there have been other instances when I have been taken to task, with equally helpful intent, for sending such persons to psychiatrists. Now, it is my opinion that the psychiatrist, diagnostician and physician who is a real adornment to his profession recognizes, respects and recommends (when necessity for such recommendation is indicated) the contribution which his brother-in-science is prepared to make in the work of rehabilitating ailing personalities.

• • • •

Furthermore, it has been my observation and experience that the ablest diagnosticians today bring a knowledge of psychiatrist lore to their professional task, and that psychiatrists recognize the value of internal medicine, in many cases, in treating glandular disturbances created by psychic distress. I have known instances where psychiatrists of the highest repute have sent would-be patients to diagnostician or physician; and other instances where physician or diagnostician has sent those who fondly hoped to be cured by medicine or surgery to psychiatrists for treatment.

• • • •

Although your experience has been bitterly disillusioning, I would say—in all fairness to the medical profession—that it is probably to be regarded as a painful exception to the general rule. On one thing we may agree, at least, to wit, that each of us is speaking from personal experience; and if yours has been such as to inspire distrust of medical men, mine has been just the reverse.

Casual Hats in Smart Summer Versions

FOLLOWING THE spring trend toward femininity, the new tailored hats for summer have gone feminine. It is usually done with effective trimming methods, for instance, several brilliant or pastel tinted scarfs wound around the crown and falling gracefully at the back or side. These appear in both soft felts and straws with lovely new textures. Pique and grosgrain bands, finished with perky bows, are other chic decorative mediums for these gay new casual interpretations.

1938 Dress Slogan Is: 'Be Gay, Young —And Confident'

Paris (U.P.).—Multicolored knits, not only in vivacious scarfs and sweaters, but also in street and formal dresses, have been selected by leading designers in a new group of models interpreting their fashion slogan for 1938: "Be gay, young and confident."

Very confident is a finely knitted pearl-gray evening gown worn under a mink coat. The frock is starkly simple, very decollette, fitted at the beltless waist, and woven pillar-svelte straight to the floor. With it goes a "straight and square" elbow-length jacket, also knitted with the fine pearl-gray yarn.

More elaborate and extremely gay is a Chinese blue cocktail gown with red, yellow and purple flowers knitted in clusters all around the waist and at the knees where the skirt drops to a flare widened by four slits at the front, back and sides. The sleeves are long and taper to a "V" over the wrists. With the model is worn a knitted, stiffened, wide-brimmed hat, the crown covered with gay flowers.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 14.

SINCE THIS IS the season of the year when, according to tradition, love falls profusely upon the just and the unjust, it would be decidedly unfair not to spread upon the record the brief, pungent story of the most violent attack of the Vigorous Passion ever to come before the public eye in this love-ridden city. So terrific was it, indeed, that the recipient was forced to bring the whole thing before Magistrate Jacob Eilperin and ask him to suppress the sender!

ALICE HUGHES.

About four years ago, says the tender tale, the eye of Mr. David Lloyd Brother, bookkeeper, now 24, fell upon the person of Miss Dorothy Hochman, now 22, stenographer, in the office where both labored. The conventional chemical explosion took place, or occurred. In short, love burgeoned. And there he was, but the ensuing story is anything but ordinary. David's wooing took on epic proportions. His love for Dot was the distillation of a million springs!

Before the learned judge, Miss Hochman estimated his tender messages at 10,000 in the four years. Sometimes as many as 10 a day arrived. Most of them, naturally, followed the regular pattern of "I love you, I adore you, I worship you, and will you be mine?" Young men in love react alike, and find emotional catharsis in the same poverty-stricken words. Once, says the record, David struck another note by saying "Any time I see you with a fellow, no matter where it be, I'll knock his teeth out." And Miss Hochman told his honor she had never done more to encourage the lad than pass the time of day, as a fellow-worker. But nothing daunted David—not even the summons. In fact, he wired her, on its receipt, "Received summons. I love you. Nothing can change that, darling!"

Well, Judge Eilperin had a long talk with poor, smitten David. The latter apologized, promised not to send further notes or gifts, and the celebrated case was closed. But 10,000 avowals in four years! If that isn't love, I don't know what it is! Don't think for a second I mean to poke fun at David Lloyd Brother. Even in old age I remember too keenly the pangs of puppy-love!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Almost overnight the sidewalk life of our hopeful city comes to life in mid-April. The old women who sell flowers appear from somewhere, specializing in bachelors' buttons and carnations for the male lapels. Passing Mr. Jack Dempsey's famed restaurant at Fiftieth street and Broadway the other day I was surprised to see one of the plate-glass windows busted clean in—not the one which holds the magnums of vintage champagnes, but the one which displays the fresh vegetables! Could anyone have been so hungry as to smash this huge window just to grab a gay head of cabbage? I can't believe it. That must have been an accident!

• • • •

Don't get me wrong—I don't frequent such places. But a few days ago a business date lured me into the cocktail lounge at 70 Park avenue, and I heard Hank, the gentlemanly bartender, say "Three Hemingways!" Curious, I asked him what the tipple was he labeled thus, and he said "Martinis." When I asked why, he answered, simply, "Death in the afternoon." I was answered.

I hope the bustling city of Pueblo, Colo., is properly swelling with just pride. One of its fairest daughters, Elizabeth Watson Deuel, has just been given the Public Service Fellowship of $1,400 by our Barnard College. She won it for social service work in Utah.

Claire Potter, that gifted designer, horse-lover and raiser of Alsatians, has come to bat with one of the season's most popular sweater styles—short-waisted knit, worn over a black princess skirt.

Olivia de Havilland and her mama fooled us reporters when they climb aboard the Normandie the other day. They signed the book under ma's name, so the little screen star appeared as Lavinia Halliday. She's supposed to meet her fiance, the Baron Michelham (pronounced MMMMM) when they get to London.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

How to Stay Slim.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The low maintenance diet is supposed to provide a minimum ration for the person who is inclined to become overweight.

Since in 99 per cent of cases the person who is "inclined to become overweight" is that way because he or she eats too much, the principles of the low maintenance diet are simple—reduce the total intake, do not eat concentrated foods, never completely satisfy, or at least, never oversatisfy, your appetite.

If any adult, except of extremely low height, will stay on 2,000 calories a day, he will achieve and maintain a comfortable and healthy weight, no matter how much activity or exercise he gets.

It isn't necessary for the overweight to take any great pains to calculate down to calories his low maintenance diet. A few simple procedures are sufficient. Here are some hints.

Breakfast: If you can school yourself to take a simple fresh fruit and black coffee breakfast, you have gone a long way. It is surprising how many nutritious and fattening things we eat at breakfast. I showed yesterday that simply the addition of an egg, a rasher of bacon, toast, butter, cream and sugar for the coffee added 700 calories to the breakfast. And oatmeal and cream and sugar make up almost as much. It would take a strenuous morning's work to require that much fuel. Nobody doing office work needs it.

Some say they get headachy or nervous on so small a breakfast. If you really think this is cause and effect, add something, but by all means make it carry less voltage than the 1,000-calorie addition outlined above. A small piece of toast with nonfattening butter (see below) should carry anyone through the morning.

Butter and other fats: Here, I am convinced, is the principal danger. Fats contribute so much to the palatability of our meals— gravies, salad dressings, vegetables cooked in butter and cream, fried foods—all these are tempting and the overweight is by the very nature of the case an epicure, with a palate attuned to his sauces.

Substitutes Used.

Butter can be replaced by Lister's Golden Spread which, to my mind, fulfills nearly all the gustatory properties of butter. It cannot be used for cooking, so we will allow cream or butter cooked vegetables occasionally.

Salad dressings of all kinds can be made of mineral oil, which has no coloric value. It is simply substituted for olive oil.

Eye Make-Up Must Be Right With Face Veil

By Carolyn Abbott.

EYES that peek through or peer over the veils of a new Easter hat can be as alluring as those of the veiled Oriental beauties steeped in the ancient art of eye fascination.

As with them—so with the modern woman who would wear a veil effectively—it's largely a matter of eye make-up. Veils give the eyes a shadowed look which can be either attractive or grotesque. Dark eye shadow in purple or brown accentuates the shadows over the eyes and causes them to appear sunken and too deeply set. Whereas, light blue or green eye shadows under a veil gives a soft, luminous effect. Use light blue if your eyes are blue and green or blue-green if they are brown. A heavy eye make-up of dark shadow or black pencil makes the eyes look hard and steely and not too feminine.

Blue Mascara Used.

Navy blue mascara gives the appearance of black but is softer than the coal-black mascara, particularly when worn under a veil. It's becoming and flattering to both blue and brown eyes. The new blue smoke eyeshadow is essentially flattering to blue eyes and the emerald green eyeshadow enhances brown eyes. The whole idea of mascara is to make a frame for the eyes. Persian and Arabian women who wear no other cosmetics emphasize the eyes with make-up. They make their mascara and eyeshadow with soot, oil and bark from certain trees. Not only do they spend hours making eye cosmetics, but they spend much time in applying it expertly.

Mascara should be put on with an upward stroke with a fairly dry brush so the lashes won't stick together. After the coloring has dried go over the lashes again with a clean dry brush. Brush them sideways back and forth to separate them. If the lashes are brittle and dry brush a little olive oil on them This will give them a fresh, dewy appearance and prevent their breaking off. In applying mascara to the lower lashes use a downward stroke.

Harsh Effect Given.

Dark lines drawn under the lower lashes give a hard, haggard appearance to the eyes at any time, but under a veil the effect is doubly harsh. A little eye pencil may be used sparingly on the top eyelid if you start the line at the middle of the eyelid just behind the lashes and draw it out toward the corner, smudging it upward at the corners But keep the line very faint.

It's much safer to use a little mascara to darken the eyebrows than a pencil unless you can apply it with the delicate touch of an expert However, for the most part it's better to leave off the eye pencil when you are wearing a veil.

Eyebrows should have a becoming sweep to give character to the face. Follow the natural arch of your eyes when styling the eyebrows. Then length and breadth of your eyebrows should be determined by the size and shape of your eyes and forehead.

Nourishment, Zest Are Lent to Spring Menus by Cheese

3. Scalloped tomatoes and cheese, baked potato, creamed string beans and buttered carrots.
4. Macaroni and kidney beans au gratin, buttered spinach, creamed cabbage and hot spiced beets.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Resolutions for an Easter Shopper.

I will not hurry nor get that hell-bent-for-election look on my face. I will move leisurely and gracefully through the stores so that nobody will halt me with a "What's the matter? Are you going to a fire?"

I will repair frequently to the department store rest rooms to restore my make-up and eliminate the ravages of fatigue so I shall never face an harassed hag when I inadvertently glance in a mirror.

I will not lunch on a soda sitting on a high stool at a counter because I am in a hurry, or because my conscience pricks me over what I paid for my new blouse.

I will not dodge friends and acquaintances (at least not all of them) because I don't want to be interrupted. And if I am caught by them in the bargain basement I will meet the situation with grace and aplomb.

I will ruthlessly take myself in hand and stay away from the dress goods counters heaped with luscious flowered fabrics lest I be tempted to take home a few yards of something I can "run up" in my spare moments.

I will throttle that impulse to go near any gorgeous print dress with yellow daisies or blue cornflowers.

No matter how hurried I am I will not weaken and let my head arrive at my destination a half hour in advance of my body.

I will not clutch my pocketbook tensely as if I were looking for a pickpocket on every side and I will not try to make it perform the functions of a valise.

No matter how small the parcel is I buy I will not weaken and say, "Oh, I'll just take it along."

I will not buy any pretty handkerchiefs I don't need, or cute little boleros to liven up old dresses or fluffy white lace collars or enticing lavender gloves or tricky little gadgets to wear on my coat lapels.

When I have reached the stage that I am ready to call an ambulance to ride home in, I will not take an aspirin and make one more flivvered attempt to find the right dress. I will go home and wear my old one Sunday and let my personality surmount my clothes.

I will enjoy the crowds and the color and the life and the movement and keep constantly in mind that it doesn't matter a whoop 100 years from now whether I get the right bargains or pay the right prices for them.

Eliminates Curdling.

The next time a custard "curdles" on you, do not despair. Simply drop 2 or 3 marshmallows in the curdled custard and stir until they are melted. Then whip the mixture with a rotary egg beater, and in a few minutes the custard will be smooth.

Color Is Necessity In Breakfast on Easter Morning

Breakfasts on Easter morning should have the sparkle and gaiety of the new Easter gown. The lovely colors of spring can be used in both food and table decorations.

With children home from school or college, or with friends in for the morning Easter visit, the menu should have novel dishes.

The table decoration should be colored eggs. There are traditional dishes for the breakfast such as savory platters of juicy pink ham and golden and white eggs. Unusual breakfast breads are also appreciated. Here are suggestions for a meal to precede the Easter parade.

Women to Be Fetching at 40 Must Watch the Throat Line

So versatile is Irene Dunne, lovely Paramount star, that she can play any role from 17 to 70, but when starring as a juvenile, youthful appearance counts for a lot. To the exercise she gives her vocal chords as a singer must be given credit for the beautifully defined throatline.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE CONTINENTAL ATTITUDE that only experience is fascinating is catching on in this country. The woman of 40 is just beginning to live—and looks it! Never before have women of this age looked so young.

The youthful appearance of these women is no accident. It is the reward of a carefully planned and faithfully executed program to prevent the unlovely and unnecessary signs of age. One of the first concerns in such a program is the throat line, for, unless it is given some attention, that fragile line from the chin to the base of the throat can be a dead giveaway of age.

Lax muscles are to blame for chin worries. Sagging muscles pull the skin down to form folds and wrinkles. In the thin throat deep lines appear and in the fat throat chin troubles double. Exercise is the preventive of these unlovely conditions and it is the secret of many a youthful chin line among the world's most fascinating women.

Creams and lotions are very necessary aids to beauty, but don't expect too much of them. Lubricating the skin helps to prevent the crow's-feet, but will not do a thing for your lazy muscles. Patting is another measure which is apt to be overrated, and, while fine as far as it goes, it only affords a temporary stimulation of the muscles. It takes exercise to keep the muscles full and round. The throat line gets so little exercise that it is easy to understand why firm contours fall into folds and creases or assume a heavy, pudgy appearance. You will have to twist that pretty neck, and turn and stretch these muscles to keep a slim, chisled line.

You want to do everything that will increase circulation in the throat area, so begin with applications of hot and cold water, then use cream, and back these measures with exercise. First, wring a towel out of hot water and hold it about the throat. Leave for a second, and repeat. Now, do the same thing with a cold towel. These preliminary measures help to stir up the circulation. Pat on a warm oil, tissue or nourishing cream, massaging well into the skin from the base of the neck upward to the jaw line.

All this is preparatory to special chin and neck exercise. One of the simplest and most effective is to blow up a toy balloon, large size. Make a great to-do about it and really use your muscles. Keep puffing and puffing until the balloon is stretched to the breaking point. The balloon exercise not only uses the muscles of the throat but is the best eradicator we know of those parenthetical nose and mouth lines.

Cox Named Congressional Pro; Bees Beat Nats, 7-4

This Morning

Jack Bentley Appears at the Stadium.

By Shirley Povich.

POVICH.

A Griffith Stadium customer who apparently had heard but lately that Washington would be in the American League again this season was grumbling that he was unable to buy four tickets on the first base line for Monday's opening game.

Whereupon, a large citizen with graying hair remarked calmly that "You don't have any right to complain. Look at me! I have to take seats against the leftfield fence, and I'm the fellow who brought Washington its only World Series championship."

That crack was enough to excite the curiosity of this department, so we looked intently at the large citizen. He could have been a ball player in that World Series of 1924, all right . . . he wasn't that old. But he certainly wasn't Earl McNeely, who made the winning hit. And he wasn't Nemo Leibold, who made that important pinch hit. Of course he wasn't Muddy Ruel, who scored the winning run, or Walter Johnson, who held the Giants at bay in those last two innings.

"I'm Jack Bentley!"

• • • •

That cleared up a lot of things. Jack Bentley, you see, was the pitcher John McGraw sent in there to battle Walter Johnson in the fateful eleventh and twelfth innings and it was Bentley who was the victim of the famous Earl McNeely pebble hit that won the series.

He's a prosperous Washington merchant now, but he likes to visit with Clark Griffith, who gave him his start in baseball 20-odd years ago.

"I like to remind Griff that he gave away a $72,500 pitcher for $500 when he sold me to Baltimore just after the War. Did you ever hear that story?"

We had not, so we said "no"

"Well, I came off the farm at Sandy Spring, Md., about 20 miles from here, to try out with the Washington Club and Griffi signed me to a contract right away. I pitched for Washington for four years . . . beat Bob Shawkey, of the old Athletics, 1-0, with one hit and then beat Jack Warhop, of the Yankees, by the same score two days later, but I guess I was pretty wild otherwise. Anyway, Griffith let me out to the Minneapolis club.

• • • •

"I wanted to quit and go back to the farm, but Griff said he had property rights in me and I couldn't do that. He called up Billy Smith, who was manager of the Richmond club and said Richmond could have me for $500. Smith said he wouldn't have me at any price, but Griffith got his $500 from Jack Dunn of the Orioles.

"Dunn did pretty well with me—sold me to John McGraw of the Giants for $72,500 just a few years later. I think McGraw got his $72,500 worth out of me, too.

"I'll never forget that world series with Washington in 1924. Before I had gotten into that seventh game, I beat Washington once in the series and then lost a game by a run. I never pitched so hard in my life. I don't know how those other fellows did it—I always envied 'em—but I had to give everything I had on every pitch or they'd wallop what I threw up there. I was a grunt pitcher—they could hear me in both dugouts every time I let one fly.

"Goose Goslin almost ruined me a couple of times during the series. We all knew the Goose would murder a fast ball, so I threw him only two during the entire series. And he slammed both of 'em for home runs. He must have fouled off a dozen curves before he hit the second one. Joe Judge, who was next up, was leaning against his bat not so far from the plate, and he tipped off the Goose that my next pitch was going to be a fast ball. He yelled, 'Fast one! Fast one ' as I let it go, and the Goose heard him. That's all he needed. That ball cleared the fence by a million feet.

"I guess I was the first ball player that Jack Dunn sold for really big money. Lefty Grove came along with the Orioles after I had put in three years with the team and you could see from the minute he stepped out there that he was a sweet pitcher. His only fault was a tendency to pitch too quick. He'd get the ball from the catcher and heave it back almost without a pause.

"After I was sold to the Giants I sent McGraw down to Baltimore to look at Grove. I told McGraw he was worth the $100,000 they were asking for him. McGraw went to Baltimore to scout Grove and almost fired me when he came back. 'Why, that pitcher of yours walked 11 men in three innings,' he told me, 'so I walked out on him. What kind of a sap do you think I am?'

• • • •

"Connie Mack took Grove at the $100,000 price tag the next season. He cured him of his wildness, too. He made Lefty count ten between every pitch. Whenever you saw Grove digging up the mound with his toe or hitching his belt, he was just wasting time until he counted ten. The story got out, and the fans knew what Lefty was doing in all those pauses. It was a funny sight to see 35,000 fans in Shibe Park helping Grove to count ten. But it cured his wildness."

Orioles Purchase Player From Phils

High Point, N. C., April 14 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Wilson, of the Philadelphia National League club, annouced today the sale of Leo Norris, third baseman, to the Baltimore International League club. Norris came to the Phillies two years ago from the Minneapolis club as a shortstop.

Hoyas Check Rally, Beat Michigan, 9-7

Register 19th Straight Victory Before a Crowd of 1,500.

By Jack Munhall.

Choking off Michigan's ninth-inning rally after the Wolverines had scored twice and loaded the bases with two out, Georgetown University's nine captured its nineteenth straight intercollegiate victory yesterday in a weird 9-7 battle on the Hoya field.

Leading 9-5, Georgetown confidently expected Hank Bertrand to retire the Wolverines without undue trouble, for Big Hank had been pitching splendidly since relieving faltering Mike Petroskey in the fifth. Bertrand went about his task with success, or so it seemed, for he made Pink, the first hitter, pop harmlessly to Tom Keating at short.

The Trouble Starts.

But the trouble started when Brewer sent a single into left field and Walter Peckinpaugh, son of the former Cleveland manager, got a walk. Kremer forced Peckinpaugh at second for the second out, Keating to Joe Moran, Brewer moving to third.

But the fans, who had settled back in the seats after a mild scare, were soon more alarmed than ever, for Campbell blasted a single into center, scoring Brewer and Trosko doubled to deep left-center, scoring Kremer with the seventh Michigan tally. The situation became worse when Bertrand lost control and passed Goedon on five pitches to cram the sacks.

But there the Georgetown ability to come through in the pinch saved the day. Capt. Johnny Cavadine, Hoya third baseman who had made two errors, was the lad who stepped in and saved the game. For he dashed in fast, scooped up an oddly bouncing ball from the bat of Catcher Geebe and retired the batter with a perfect throw to first.

That's the way Georgetown was doing all afternoon, producing fielding gems or hits only when they were absolutely necessary. In the very first inning, the Hoyas proved hospitable hosts, making Michigan a gift of three runs by dint of some disgraceful fielding on bunts.

Pink started the provoking barrage of short hits by dumping a perfect one between Petroskey and Cavadine for a single. Brewer dropped a second bunt along the third base line and when Cavadine foozled it, all were safe. And just to show what he thought of Georgetown's fielding, Peckinpaugh, the third Wolverine batter, bunted to Petroskey, who threw wildly to first, allowing Pink to cross the plate and Brewer to advance to third.

Hoyas Score More.

And then after Petrosky had fanned Campbell and caused Frosko to foul out to Harry Bassin, Trosko singled to center, scoring Brewer and Peckinpaugh and presenting Michigan with a 3-0 lead.

Georgetown cut the margin to 3-2 in its half of the inning on four walks, a single and an error and the game moved on rather smoothly with Michigan holding leads of 4-2 and 5-3 before the Hoyas took the lead for the first time in the fifth inning. In that stanza the long silent Hoya bats began to make some noise and hastily pushed over four runs on a walk to Bassin, a double by Tony Barabas, a single by Keegin and a double by Keating.

Once in the van, Georgetown picked up speed and went on to add those three runs in the eighth which proved sufficient when Cavadine stepped in to stop the Wolverines in the ninth.

Petrosky, although he worked only five innings, was credited with his eleventh straight pitching victory. He allowed 5 hits, struck out 4 and passed 3. Herman Fishman was the losing pitcher, giving up all 8 of Georgetown's hits before he retired in favor of Smick after two were out in the eighth.

Ben Loving Takes Post As Assistant

Cox, Kenwood Pro, Will Succeed MacKenzie.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood Golf Club professional since July, 1935, was named to fill the Congressional post vacated by Roland MacKenzie, yesterday, and, thus the city's vacant golf professional posts remain at one. The new mentor will take over the job on Monday.

Cox announced that Benny Loving would accompany him to Congressional as assistant professional. Loving was recently named to Cox's staff at Kenwood when Al Jamison, former assistant, filled the Indian Spring position. This leaves the Kenwood job wide open.

Cox's name was picked from 118 who sought the spot at the Rockville club. The committee eliminated 116 of the applicants Tuesday night, leaving Cox and Roger Peacock. When the Kenwood mentor agreed to terms the vote was unanimous for him to succeed MacKenzie, who resigned to enter private business. Had Cox turned down the offer, the city's leading amateur would have turned pro.

The post will mark only the third professional berth filled by Cox, despite his lengthy career. He started as caddy, then was graduated to the shop, and after serving his apprenticeship finally took over the professional job at the Marine Field Club in Brooklyn N. Y. The name was later changed to Dyker Beach.

Cox Improved Kenwood.

Cox came to Kenwood in the latter part of July, 1935, and was nearing three years' service with the club. He is the foremost nationally known pro to fill a job in this section since Tommy Armour was pro at Congressional.

Cox improved the Kenwood layout by leaps and bounds and also made the town more golf conscious. Last year the Sunday professional exhibition matches were huge successes under Cox's guidance.

He won the District Open last year at Indian Spring and was pro-champion with Cliff Spencer. He won several one-day tournaments, and has played the Kenwood course in as low as 64 strokes.

Won Many Events.

Cox has won many of the major links affairs, but the national championships have eluded him. His biggest bid for the National Open crown came two years ago when he was an 8-to-1 choice for the title.

His principal triumphs include the San Francisco Olay Open, Agua Caliente Open, Texas, North-South, Florida opens, the international four-ball championships with Willie MacFarlane as partner, and the Pinehurst four-ball tourney twice, also with MacFarlane as a partner.

He has finished no lower than third in the Phoenix, Pasadena, La Gorce, Pensacola, Charleston, Bel Air, Orlando, Berkeley, Metropolitan, Long Island, New York State and other major open tournaments. He has won as high as $6,200 on the winter tour, reaching this total in 1929. The past year several ailments prevented him from playing in a majority of the affairs. He finished in the money at Hollyood and in the National pro-amateur with Frank Strafaci as a partner.

Loving Will Return.

Although Loving will take over the Saranac Lake Country Club position during the summer months, he will return to Congressional in September. Congressional Club President Theodore S. Grape left the golf shop personnel entirely to Cox. He also will bring Raymond Willett, who worked with him at Kenwood, to his new post, that is only about 3 miles from Kenwood, also on River road.

Cox will participate in the National Open and P. G. A. qualifying trials, and also intends to play in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. event next week at Old Point Comfort, Va.

MacKenzie, who will take over his new position as sales manager of the DuPont Laundry next week, said: "I am delighted to welcome my friend Wiffy Cox to the professional post at Congressional. I am sure he will receive the same committee support and backing I was fortunate enough to have during my four years on the job, and I

Terps Beat Penn State; Wood Stars

By Perry Wilkinson.

Maryland University's hard-hitting baseball team slammed out 13 hits while Lefty Wood was giving a great exhibition of southpaw hurling for a 7-4 victory over Penn State here yesterday for its fifth straight victory.

A small crowd watched Wood deliver a curve ball that sent seven Penn State batters back to the bench. He allowed eight hits, but kept them well scattered.

The visitors were first to score on hits by Wrigley and Vonarx in the first frame. A second inning tally on a hit by Miehoff after Mike Surgent had lost Valeri's hit to the sun field, gave Penn State a 2-0 lead.

Maryland opened its attack in the third frame when Eddie Johnson doubled Waverly Wheeler across the plate after the latter had singled. Johnson, Mike Surgent and Wheeler were batting demons today.

They were the big guns in the fifth and sixth inning uprisings that saw the Terps score five runs. Johnson doubled twice in succession. Surgent also made a 2-baser in the sixth and this, coupled with hits by Wheeler and Knepley, was enough to win the ball game.

Wood gave up two runs in the sixth on hits by Miehoff, Menzie and Valerie, but soon regained his mastery over the Pennsylvanians. The last three innings, he had them eating out of his hand.

Meanwhile, the Terps went to work on Ben Simoncelli in the eighth for the last score of the day. A triple by Surgent sent A. Chumbris home with Maryland's seventh run.

Nedomatsky Attempts Run-Out But Is Halted by Commission

Boxing Body's Physicians Examine Baltimore Boxer, Declare He's Fit to Fight on Monday.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Ivan Nedomatsky, of Baltimore, attempted to ease out of his match with Steve Mamakos, scheduled Monday night at the Arena, but his egress was blocked by the matchmaker's fiery expostulation, plus a pair of affidavits signed by two physicians representing the District Boxing Commission.

Nedomatsky, brother of Jimmy Jones, who lost to George Abrams here last Monday, ducked Mamakos once before, begging off because of an injured thumb, and it was on the thumb that he pinned his desire to be excused from Monday's match.

Early yesterday Matchmaker Ahearn received a telephone call from Heine Blaustein, Nedomatsky's manager, who announced that his boy would be unable to appear because of the ailing thumb. He was dead set against fighting until Ahearn threatened to haul him up on the carpet before the commission, which has some big contacts in the ring world, and have him suspended.

Blaustein offered to produce an affidavit signed by a Baltimore physician to the effect that his charge was in no condition to box. Ahearn retaliated with an offer to pay Nedomatsky's expenses for a trip to this city and an examination by a Boxing Commission doctor. After much bickering, Blaustein finally agreed to this.

The physicians did find the digit swollen and in need of treatment, but decided that it was not serious enough to warrant cancellation of the match. Nedomatsky was instructed how to care for the thumb and continue training for the bout. Ivan seemed incensed at this, and not only agreed to go through with the fight but knock out Mamakos in the bargain.

"I'll murder him," he told Ahearn. "I'll knock him dead with the first punch—you watch. I'm not afraid of him, or trying to run from him, but I did want to be at my best. But I'll knock him cold just the same."

Blaustein offered to substitute Jones for Nedomatsky when Ahearn refused to postpone the match two weeks.

Howard Scott, who appears in an eight-round co-feature Monday, will oppose Johnny Murray, a New York club fighter of average talent. This will be the Cowboy's first appearance here in many moons, and portends a possible outdoor match between him and Lou Gevinson for the District lightweight championship.

Can't Wait Leaves Today for East

Louisville, Ky., April 14 (AP).—Myron Selznick's Derby eligible Can't Wait was given his last breeze on the Churchill Downs oval before his scheduled departure tomorrow for Belmont Park, where he will run in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica April 30.

Trainer J. T. (Tommy) Taylor looked over the chestnut colt's time and pronounced him fit.

Young 'Peck' And Johnson Meet Today

Michigan U. Star Is Son of Famous Nat Fielder.

A couple of names that reverberated through a pennant-crazed Washington more than a decade ago will be on the score card again this afternoon at College Park, where the University of Maryland nine is host to Michigan, but this time Peckinpaugh and Johnson will be in rival line-ups.

Young Walter Peckinpaugh, 21-year-old son of one of baseball's greatest shortstops, doesn't want to follow in his dad's footsteps—not exactly. You see, the lean-faced, tanned youngster's diamond ambitions lie in the general direction of third base, and some day he hopes to make the fans admit he plays the corner sack as well as his illustrious forebear roamed the short field. He'll be at third today.

Young Johnson, a living image of his immortal dad, even down to his pigeon-toed, ambling gait, wisely decided long ago to abandon any thought of becoming a pitcher, so he'll be at second base.

Visits the Post.

A quiet, unassuming lad, young Peck visited The Post sports department with four teammates last night, and was promptly lassoed for an interview. It was a little different than snagging a liner skimming along the grass tops, but he came up and out with it nicely, as well, they told us, as he plays ball.

The boy's major difficulty is not coming in on bunts, nor going to his right for scorching ground balls, nor keeping runners close to the bag, but rather in living up to the name of Peckinpaugh. Young Johnson experienced the same handicap, and tried to evade it by playing another position. Fans take a squint at the scorecard and say:

"Oh, that's Peck's boy out there on third. Well, there'll never be another like the old man."

Young Peck tried his hand at shortstop for a time, playing the position his first three years at Shaw High School, East Cleveland, but moved over to his right in his senior year and has been parked there since. He really prefers it to the old berth.

A .300 Hitter.

Peck's batting figure hovers around the .300 standard and he's working diligently to improve it, but there seemed to be nothing wrong with his stickwork yesterday as he clubbed out a brace of singles against Georgetown. As for coaching from his father, well, the boy has never been forced to play this way or that way, to take such and such a stance at the plate, or hold his bat this way. The father has corrected his most glaring weaknesses, but otherwise not interfered with his game.

Merle Kremer, Michigan captain and leftfielder; "Pete" Lisagor, sports editor of the university daily and a reserve infielder; Burt Smith, pitcher who turned back Washington and Lee last week, and Elmer Gedeon, angular first baseman, whose Uncle Joe Gedeon played big league ball, were with Peck last night, and assisted at the interview.

"Tell him about the championship your team won in Cleveland," Lisagor said. It seems the boy was on a couple of winning clubs, Fisher Foods and Poschki Barbecue, Class A amateur teams.

So, Peck had his eye on a slice of the series melon, eh?

"Not yet," he grinned, "Right now I've got my eye on that clock. We've got to get out to College Park before they lock us out."

ATCHISON.

Washington's Bats Silenced By Lanning

By Shirley Povich.

They were limited to six hits by the lean right-hander, and the Boston Bees, who have been maltreating the Nats throughout the spring, took a parting shot in the form of a a parting shot in the form of a 7-to-4 victory over the Washington athletes.

Lanning is not supposed to be a star pitcher, but the Nats were finding it difficult to prove that yesterday. In six of the nine innings they made no hits at all, and in seven they made no runs, which explains much.

It began as a very unhappy afternoon for Manager Bucky Harris, who saw his pet, Monte Weaver, knocked loose from all of the Bees' seven runs in the first three innings, but later in the day Harris' spirits rose perceptibly.

Kohlman Pitches Well.

Because he saw young Joe Kohlman, late of the Class D Eastern Shore League, go out to the mound in the last five innings and pitch an hour of superb baseballl against the Bees. It was Kohlman's first outing since he had complained of a sore arm, and may win him a reprieve from the minors.

The lad, who was snatched from the Salisbury (Md.) club last fall after winning 24 straight games, put a sudden and almost complete end to the slugging of the Bees when he relieved Weaver at the end of the fourth inning. He gave up only three hits, yielded no runs at all, struck out three and displayed both poise and control.

Buddy Myer and Goose Goslin were the only Washington athletes who were not visibly annoyed by Lanning's pitching. Each of that pair collected two solid hits—Myer whaling out a lusty double and a length triple, and Goslin knocking two singles. Taft Wright hit for a single and Cecil Travis pounded out a three-bagger, and there were no other Washington hits.

The Bees didn't dally with Weaver. Roy Johnson, the reformed American Leaguer whacked a three-bagger to right center in the first inning and Weaver wild-pitched him across the plate. The Bees picked up another run in the next inning. It was done very simply—a double to left by Vince Di Maggio and a single to center by Gilbert English.

The Bees were downright obstreperous against Weaver in the third but it wasn't entirely his blame. With Mayo on first after his single, Cecil Travis made a miserable muff on a double play ball flipped to him by Buddy Myer, and all hands were safe. Then Moore beat out a bunt in front of the plate and the bases were full with none out.

Cuccinello Gets Single.

At this point Tony Cuccinello lashed a single to left and two runs scored, but that wasn't all. Goose Goslin heaved the ball into the Bees' dugout in an attempt to get it back to the infield, and Moore also scored. Then along came Max West with a line drive to the right field which Taft Wright played poorly and it evolved as a triple that scored Moore. English brought West home from third with a fly to Almada.

That made the score 5-2. The Nats had picked up two runs in the second inning when Bonura walked, Travis tripled to the center field corner and Myer doubled to left. But after that, Lanning permitted few liberties. Through the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth inning, not a Nat reached base.

Teddy Weed, Paying $13.20, Wins Closing Day Feature Race at Bowie

Mother, Mother, may I go out to race?
Yes, my darling wretch
If you wants to win and not to place,
Keep outside in the stretch.

The Maryland racing scene shifts from Prince Georges to Harford County and from the pine tree country to the banks of the Susquehanna River today. Until the end of the month, Havre de Grace, affectionately known as "The Graw," will provide the bangtail show hereabouts and with a good line-up of stake events, the meeting should not be without its thrills and chills.

HAIGHT.

Havre de Grace has topnotch races for all ages of horses. Today, the 2-year-olds will get a chance to do their respective stuff for $2,500 added money in the historic Aberdeen. The race is at the baby horse distance of four furlongs. Tomorrow "The Graw" will add $5,000 to the pay-off in the Harford Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward.

* * * *

The high point of the meeting will be reached a week from tomorrow when 3-year-olds will vie in that famous Derby trial, the Chesapeake. Horses being pointed for the Derby and the Preakness will be given their final tests, being shipped to Kentucky or not according to their showings. It was in this race last year that War Admiral definitely proved he was big-league timber.

The Admiral ran for $10,000 added money last year. This season the track has boosted the ante to $15,000.

The Potomac Handicap, to be run here on closing day, will provide distance action for the older horses as well as 3-year olds. It will be contested at a mile and sixteenth. War Admiral is eligible but a doubtful starter, despite the fact that Havre de Grace is his "home" track. However, Aneroid and perhaps ten other first-rate handicap horses will vie for the $10,000 added purse.

Virginia, where horse breeding is big business but horse racing is barred, will be formidably represented at "The Graw." Kennett Gilpin and Frank Buchanan, from the Shenandoah Valley; John P. Jones and J. B. Belk, brothers-in-law, of Charlottesville, and George C. Brenton, of historic Manassas, are some of the owners who will send their charges postward.

In the Gilpin string will be Buck Langhorne and Kenty, half brothers; Tedmelia and several up-and-coming youngsters.

* * * *

Around Kenty, who has been racing at Bowie, there's a breeding story that borders on scandal in horse circles. Kenty, named for Gilpin's splendid estate, Kentmore, 20 miles from the Charles Town track, probably set a record for youthful horses as sires. When he was barely two years old, he was bred and sired Kenty Miss, a filly who won at the last Hialeah meeting.

It was a "June and December" romance that produced the filly. A shameless hussy, named Ultimately, must have taken advantage of an adolescent's innocence. Kenty was 4 years old and she was 16 years old. But despite the disparity in their ages, Kenty Miss is speedy and may make a high mark in racing.

In the meanwhile, Kenty, now 5 years old, is rounding into form. He gave evidence of coming into his own at Bowie and should start visiting the winners' circle soon.

Frank Buchanan places his chief hopes for purses at Havre de Grace in Now Then, twice a Bowie winner. Buchanan refused $10,000 for this colt last year after he downed Dauber, Pasteurized and other smart youngsters at Delaware Park. A son of Dis Donc, he has speed and stamina.

Rex Flag and Conquer are the big shots of the J. P. Jones Stable, although the barn includes many promising juveniles. Belk has Wise Sister, Way Out, Madame Walter and others.

Brilliant Play, The Favorite, Runs Second

Wayne Wright Sends His Mount Ahead Early to Win Race.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie Race Track, April 14.—Teddy Weed, a growing 3-year-old son of Teddy, hot-footed around this race track to win the Howard W. Jackson purse, closing day feature race named for Baltimore's mayor. The boss of the Monumental City said after the race that this was the twelfth annual event in his honor and that he was exactly $24 loser.

"These Jackson races are going to break me yet," he laughed.

Teddy Weed, ridden by Jockey Wayne Wright, took the victory by the simple, but effective method of getting to the front and staying there. Brilliant Play, one that chased the winner from the break, was the favorite and finished second, beaten a length and a half. Brilliant Play barely lasted ahead of Warlaine's charge.

It was at a $13.20 mutuel that Teddy Weed performed. In his previous start in the mud, he was not prominent. Today his time of 1:46 1-5 was excellent when the slow condition of the track is considered.

Jockey Wright, who rode the winner, and Apprentice Berger, on Arachne, barely escaped $50 fines when they made false breaks while assistant starters were trying to tame Warlaine. A bell rang in the mutuel department and the sound carried to the track. Both Wright and Berger informed Starter Jim Milton and when this fact was substantiated by others, the riders were exonerated.

Brilliant Play, started with the aid of pinchers, was first to show in front but Teddy Weed was in command before the field reached the far turn. Up the backstretch, Teddy Weed opened a wide gap. Wright gave him a breather swinging for the stretch and then put him to pressure that Brilliant Play and the fast-closing Warlaine could not match.

Summer weather, plus the fact that the bangtails move to Havre de Grace tomorrow, served to bring out a crowd of 9,000. Exactly 299 of those present bought daily double tickets on the "9 and 9" combination of Last Scamp and Dizzy Dame and collected $50.60.

Jim John, at $8, led throughout the running of the seventh race, defeating Vitamin B. by a length and Sand Cloud by two lengths. Jockey Freddy Faust, Washington boy, rode the winner.

Queen Elizabeth, owned by Bernard Bond, Baltimore insurance man, stepped to the imaginary wire three-parts of a length in front of Grace Grier in the sixth race. Third money was taken by Miss Tiptoe, co-favorite with Grace Grier of the group on nine. Queen Elizabeth caught Grace Grier after the latter had opened a lead of five lengths at one stage. The winner, handled by Jockey Ralph Eccard, paid $9.90.

The Bosley Family gave the field the one-two punch in the first race although the two horses, Last Scamp and Windsor's Hope, were not listed as an entry. Last Scamp came from behind to win the colors of Mrs. John Bosley while her husband's Windsor's Hope set the pace and stopped. Vitascope was second in a photo for that position with Opoca. Last Scamp had only a limited number of backers and supplied a $26.80 pay-off while excellently handled by Jockey Hubert Leblanc.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM JOHN, $8.00, $4.00, $2.60; VITAMIN B, $4.50, $2.80; SAND CLOUD, $2.60.

JIM JOHN, sent to front at once, saved ground and held VITAMIN B safe while under driving tactics. VITAMIN B was steadied along while in close quarters going to backstretch, saved ground entering stretch, but tired suddenly. SAND CLOUD moved up menacingly leaving backstretch, but faltered.

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

This is not the Aneroid alibi department, but the Washington-owned horse did meet interference nearing the stretch turn in last Wednesday's race. In fact, the stewards had a suspension all written out for Jockey Bobby Merritt who rode Bunny Baby. However, Sonny Workman, Aneroid's rider, was called in and he exonerated Merrit. He said that Floyd Smock, on Chaps, forced him into Bunny Baby. The stewards evidently figured that Chaps' action was not deliberate and did not rule against Smock. Challephen, winner of the race, was bred up by Frederick, Md., on the Branncastle Farm and is trained by Lou Schaefer, former jockey. Elmer Trueman, Washington trainer, has 20 horses at Havre De Grace for Millsdale Stable and A. Pelleteri. They wintered at Bennings, D. C. The Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip makes his debut today. Bert Michell, former Denmark trainer, shipped into The Graw with eight horses owned by E. D. Shaffer. They came up from Florida. Jockey J. Longden reported yesterday and will ride Charlotte Girl in today's Aberdeen. The Havre De Grace track is much faster than Bowie. Tommy Rodrock has sh

April 15 is the red letter day on more than one fisherman's calendar for—it is opening day in the Province of Quebec for muskelonge and pickerel, minimum size 15 inches and four muskies per day.

It is the first day of the trout season in Massachusetts, where the minimum legal length is 6 inches and a daily bag of 15 is permitted (except on the great ponds, where it is but 5). Fishing is permitted from 1 hour before sunrise until 2 hours after sunset. Season closes July 31.

ACKERMAN.

Salmon are fair game in the Bay State on this same date, with the exception of Barnstable and Plymouth counties, which opened on March 1. Minimum length 12 inches and a daily bag of 5.

Jerseymen also take to their trout streams, and if the stocking program is any criterion, there is bound to be some swell fishing on not only the famous trout streams such as the South Branch of the Raritan, the Musconetoong, Flat, Pequest, Wanaque, Black and the Paulinskill, but on the numerous creeks, runs, lakes and ponds as well.

Hundreds of thousands of adult fish already have been placed in the waters of 19 of the 21 counties, and as they are fished out others will be planted through the season, which does not close until July 15; opening again for the month of September.

Although Jersey has a creel limit of ten trout, many are refusing to catch more than four or five, and with a minimum length of seven inches, rarely creel one under nine. Real evidence of their appreciation of the kind of fishing supplied by a progressive commission.

Stockings during the season are posted by signs "No Fishing Between Signs Today." Anglers are expected to obey. The penalty is revocation of license.

* * * *

Connecticut streams are open today, until July 15. Legal length, 6 inches; limit, 10 pounds in any one day or not more than 15 trout. Lake trout, April 15 to August 31. Legal length, 10 inches.

In the past Connecticut never felt it was possible to invite anglers from other States to visit her streams, because the supply was inadequate for her own anglers. But that seems to be changing, probably from the greatly increased production of her well managed hatcheries, which during the past year planted many hundred thousand trout.

If you are going to visit this section during open season, and do not know just where to go, give us a ring or write a letter. The many thousands of streams in our files are yours for the asking.

Decrease in Games' Size Is Foreseen

Event on Smaller Scale if Japan Should Give Up Classic.

By the United Press.

New York, April 14.—Possibility that the 1940 Olympic games may be transferred from Japan was reported today by Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, upon his return from the Cairo meeting of the international Olympic committee.

Brundage expressed a personal opinion that the games will be held in Tokyo. However, he revealed that the Japanese delegate was asked to relinquish the games at an early date if there is any possibility because of the Chinese war, that the project is to be abandoned. In such an eventuality the I. O. C. would consider the possibility of awarding the 1940 date to another nation.

If the Tokyo site is abandoned, the games, if held, would be on a considerably reduced basis. It requires some three years to gear for a complete set of Olympic games.

Brundage said that the most important development from the United States point of view was the postponement of the opening day from August 24 to September 21, because of more favorable weather later in the year. The games will end on October 6.

This means that college students will either have to give up the first semester or refrain from competition. In the case of many athletes participation would mean skipping an entire year, as some colleges operate on a yearly basis instead of by semesters.

Brundage stressed the point that the postponement from the customary August dates did not originate with the Japanese. In fact, the Japanese took no part in the discussions on the matter. All opposition to the change in dates came from the United States delegation—Frederic R. Coudert, William May Garland and Brundage.

Londos Wins Over Dr. Murphy; Boston Medico Breaks 2 Ribs

Dr. John Murphy took a dive last night at Turner's Arena—not a plunge of ring parlance, but the real McCoy, and upon regaining his senses painfully discovered he had two cracked ribs and a defeat on his record.

Jim Londos, king of another era in wrestling, was awarded the decision when Murphy, lying prostrate at the feet of ringside customers, was counted out by Referee Ben Bortnick. The affair lasted just 26 minutes.

But that isn't the only bit of action the fans enjoyed. Walter Gray, strictly an amateur, lost a mutiple decision—and almost his pants, in an impromptu scuffle with Man-Mountain Jacobs and Bortnick. Mr. Gray climbed up in the ring in hot pursuit of Jacobs, and ran into unexpected competition. He was hauled down like a flag at sundown, but with nearly as much ceremony.

Jacobs, incidentally, aroused Gray's sporting blood by the rough manner in which he pinned Ivan Bacturoff after 13 minutes of toil, using a crotch hold and body slam.

Other results—some of which Gray found wholly satisfactory, were Jose Rodriguez's 13½ minute victory over Rinato Martinelli, using a flying tackle and body press; Dutch Schultz's triumph over Carlos Martinez in 14½ minutes with a headlock and body press; and Bhu Pinder's 21-minute decision over Mike Kilonis with a crotch-hold and backdrop.

Londos proved that he still retains most of the power and cunning that kept him atop the volcanic heap five years, but was thrown off his feet for the first time, in Washington at least, by the ambitious young medico. He wriggled free immediately however, out you could see he didn't like it.

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

With the baseball season opening next week, I figure that sorrel-topped Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has prior rights over titian-tressed and freckle-necked Donald Budge, America's No. 1 tennis player who really won't become cock of the sports walk until late summer when the Davis Cup and National tennis tourneys get down to fundamentals.

CUDDY.

Perhaps I should not mention MacPhail, business manager of the Gowanus Gamboliers, and the white-flanneled Budge in the same breath, but since they are splitting even Stephen on the news plays, right now, I will discuss both.

Surely Don Budge never demanded a hundred bucks from those New Zealanders before he consented to play strictly amateur tennis in Auckland. The New Zealand sportsman charges that Budge did that very thing on his recent Antipodes tour. But we know Donald never would do a thing like that because he is a simon-pure racqueteer—a fellow who turned down $75,000 to turn professional last autumn.

* * * *

So — we'll dismiss Budge with this assurance, confident that the United States Lawn Tennis Association will take no action on the Auckland charges. Remember, children, Budge is the goose that will lay the golden eggs for the U. S. L. T. A. in the year 1938. And don't forget that as Budge goes — so goes the Davis Cup, which we won last year after a decade of futile trying.

MacPhail broke into the news this week when he expressed vehement doubts about the authenticity of a certain prognostication given off by Manager "Boily" Grimes of the Dodgers. Grimes actually predicted that the Dodgers would wind up in seventh place in the National League pennant race. MacPhail, who is trying to make the bailiwick of Brooklyn pennant conscious, leaped out of his swivel chair and yelled, "Tain't so! Tain't so! I don't think Grimes said we were going to finish seventh."

* * * *

MacPhail might have sprayed consternation into the sports-writing and sports-reading world with his thundering doubts, except for the fact that Manager Grimes gave his selections to a United Press correspondent in the Southland in black and white. Grimes went further. He picked the National League to finish as follows: Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

Certain informants explain the MacPhail-Grimes misunderstanding like this:

When Larry boomed into the Dodgers' training camp at Clearwater, Fla., he enthusiastically pronounced the Gowanus Gamboliers a vastly improved team—after the addition of Camilli and Durocher. Larry was ebullient over the Dodgers' prospects. But before he left the camp, my informants say, he figured he had hit into a psychological double play. So, to prevent overconfidence among the Daffiness Boys, Larry did an aboutface and declared the Dodgers still were a second division club. Hence, Manager Grimes—trying to play along with the absent MacPhail—gave off his seventh place prediction, to make certain the Ebbets Field Fusileers were not too inflated.

* * * *

For years the Dodgers have been regarded as the outfit which must supply the comedy relief for the somewhat serious game of baseball. They have been called the Funny Boys of Flatbush, the Goofy Gamboliers of the Gowanus, and the Daffy Dodgers. But MacPhail insisted that he would put an end to merriment and comedy when he became business manager before the '38 season. Grimes has insisted likewise. But it seems that the vaudeville or circus motif will not be muffled. And there will be a lot of fun in Brooklyn before the smoke fades from the bonfire already ignited by MacPhail's rubbing elbows with rough-tough Boily Grimes.

Wilson Defeats Landon Prep, 12-3

Woodrow Wilson's diamond team literally walked away with a 12-3 victory over Landon Prep in a seven-inning game played yesterday at Georgetown Prep. The winners made only three hits off Dorian, but 14 bases on balls issued by the hurler proved to be his downfall.

Bill Hawksworth, Wilson's All-High School first sacker, accounted for all of the victor's hits, getting a triple, double and single.

Claims Swim Mark.

Moscow, April 14 (AP).—Semion Boichenko of Moscow today claimed a new world's swimming record for the 200 meters breast-stroke. Boichenko was clocked in two minutes, 36.2 seconds, compared with the listed world standard of 2:37.2 established by Jack Kasley at New Haven, Conn., in 1936.

Episcopal Scores Clean Sweep in Running Competition.

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Episcopal High School's track squad continued its assault on school records here this afternoon, while taking a meet from McKinley Tech, of Washington, 77 to 50. Two marks, one of which had stood for eleven years, were eclipsed by the Maroon runners during the afternoon.

In scoring their fourteenth consecutive dual victory, the Maroons made a clean sweep of the running events, in which they scored eight first places, and yielded the visitors but three firsts in the field events. Tech's lone wins were scored in the pole vault, broad jump, and shot put.

Episcopal's mile relay team, with two substitutes in the line-up, outdistanced the Tech quartet to finish in the fast time of 3 minutes and 31 seconds, shattering the mark of 3:31.4 established by the crack squad of 1936. Thus, with John Mason and Peyton Hopkins running for Bill Marbury and Charlie Henderson, ill in the school infirmary, they qualified for the forthcoming Penn Relays by bettering the required time of 3:32.

The second record was surpassed by John Todd, who stepped the low hurdles in 24.9 seconds, to better the mark of 25 flat hung up by Harris Flippen back in 1927. Todd equaled the same record in last week's meet with the Maryland freshmen.

Fleishmann gave the Manuel Trainers their first win when he tossed the shot 46 feet 11¾ inches, while Gilmore won the high jump at 5 feet 7 inches, and Baulsir took the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 4½ inches.

Tood took a wide lead in the race for individual scoring honors when he turned in three first places, winning both low and high hurdles events, and the 100-yard dash, for a total of 15 points. The Maroons came up with another double winner in Howard Goodwin, who copped the javelin and discus throws.

100-yard dash—Won by Todd (E.); second, Bryant (T.); third, Smith (T.). Time, 10.2 seconds.

220-yard dash—Won by Hopkins (E.); second, Smith (T.); third, Willis (E.). Time, 22.7 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Todd (E.); second, Dean (T.); third, Bowman (T.). Time, 24.9 seconds (new school record).

440-yard run—Won by Cronly (E.); second, Montgomery (T.); third, McNelly (T.). Time, 53.1 seconds.

880-yard run—Won by Tucker (E.); second, Edwards (T.); third, Affer (T.). Time, 2:3.8.

One-mile run—Won by Rainey (E.); second, Jordan (E.); third, Stell (T.). Time, 5:0.6.

Javelin throw—Won by Goodwin (E.); second, Baulsir (T.); third, Bradfield (T.). Distance, 162 feet 11¾ inches.

High jump—Won by Gilmore (T.); second, Jordan (E.); third, Detoris (T.) and Mantsouris (T.), tied. Height, 5 feet 7 inches.

Pole vault—Won by Suhling (E.); second, Holbrook (T.); third, McMasters (T.). Height, 10 feet 6 inches.

One-mile relay—Won by Episcopal (Hopkins, Mason, Cronly, Jordan). Time, 3:31 (new school record).

Tackle Signed By Redskins

Martin, New Hampshire Star, Joins Pros.

Chief George Marshall yesterday added another player to the collection he is assembling to defend the Tribe's football championship next season by signing Russ Martin, beefy New Hampshire tackle.

A 208 pounder, guaranteed grade A brawn, Martin stands 5 feet 10 inches tall, is 23 years old and lives in Gloucester, Mass. He will graduate in June.

Recommended to the Washington Club by George Sauer, former Green Bay star and now coach at New Hampshire, Martin qualifies as an excellent place kicker as well as top-notch tackle. He made good on 14 out of 16 attempts at the point-after-touchdown last season, and booted two field goals, one to defeat Tufts, 3-0.

$20,000 Pimlico Race Will Lure Seabiscuit East

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 14.—Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, War Admiral's challenger in the $100,000 match race at Belmont Park May 30, will receive preliminary training at Pimlico and may race in the $20,000 Dixie Handicap there May 11.

A. G. Vanderbilt, vice president of the Maryland Jockey Club, said today he received word from Howard, now on the West Coast, that the 'Biscuit would be shipped East on Monday, with a string of 23 other Howard racers.

The Dixie, Pimlico officials pointed out, would fit in admirably with Seabiscuit's training for the "race of the century." If he does not run in the 'Cap, they contended, Trainer Tom Smith would possibly enter him in an overnight event before the Dixie is run.

Pimlico was the scene of the 'Biscuit's last Eastern showing, when Esposa nosed him out by a narrow margin in the Bowie Handicap shortly before Howard shipped his star Westward.

"McDonald Speaking"

Arch McDonald Opens Year's Baseball Broadcasts Monday

On Monday, at 2:45 p. m., Arch McDonlad will take up a 154-day residence in his recently constructed penthouse on the roof of Griffith Stadium high above home plate.

He will clear his throat, slick his lips, move to the microphone and, most any time after that, will begin the first of the summer-long broadcasts that will bring to Washington baseball fans both the home and out-of-town games of the Nats for the first time in history.

McDonald will be operating from the new broadcasting booth erected high above the playing field under his own supervision. The penthouse is modernistic in architecture and furnished in typical McDonald style—everything overstuffed.

There is no truth in the report that a freight elevator will be installed to make McDonald's ascent easier.

McDonald's broadcasts will be sponsored by the makers of the cereal Wheaties, the General Mills, Inc., in co-operation with Station WJSV and The Washington Post.

McDonald, who has broadcast the Nats' out-of-town games for the past four years, and during that period has won several national awards as the outstanding baseball broadcaster, will be assisted by Warren Sweeney, of the WJSV staff. Sweeney will announce the pregame matter. A statistician also will work with McDonald.

The Post, which has co-operated with McDonald's broadcasts of the Nats' games for the past three years, will provide McDonald with the play-by-play details of the Nats' games in other cities, as described by Shirley Povich, Post baseball writer.

Shea Loses To Ryerson

McCarthy Enters Finals at White Sulphur.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 14.—Shooting par golf, Jack Ryerson, of Cooperstown, N. Y., brushed aside his semifinal opponent, William Shea, of Georgetown, today in the Mason and Dixon tournament, 3 and 2.

The triumph left but one obstacle between the New Yorker and his third championship in the event, which would give him permanent possession of the coveted trophy which has been in competition since 1921.

Ryerson's obstacle will be his long driving opponent in tomorrow's finals, Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Va., whose play throughout the tournament has been spectacular. McCarthy eaily eliminated Henry Williams, of New York, 5 and 4, today after his opponent almost disqualified himself.

Williams had teed up his ball and was preparing to drive when someone in the gallery called his attention to the 18 clubs in his bag, four over the prescribed number. He removed the four clubs and drove.

After turning the ninth all even, both in 38 strokes, McCarthy promptly won the next five holes.

Wheat Rises With Message Of President

Advances Reach 2½ Cents a Bushel With Best Prices Near Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—Wheat shot up 2½ cents a bushel in violent buying outbursts today that accompanied President Roosevelt's announcement of a $7,000,000,000 recovery program.

Topmost prices reached were current just before the day's dealings ended. After the gist of the President's message became public, the market pointed higher, but at 2 cents up was halted temporarily by rushes to realize profits.

News from Washington that the United States Treasury had at once desterilized its entire hoard of $1,391,000,000 of inactive gold did not become public till long after wheat trading here had ceased. The action was construed by grain traders as definitely inflationary.

District League To Hear British Building Head

Sir Harold Bellman Will Address Annual Conference Here.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League will hear Sir Harold Bellman, managing director of London's largest building society and president of the International Congress of Building Societies, when he addresses 500 savings and loan representatives at the eighth annual Southeastern conference, April 27 and 28, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Lowell J. Chawner, chief of construction, economics section, marketing research division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is scheduled to speak before the conference on "What Are the Business Curves Affecting Savings and Loan Activities." Carl J. Bergmann, treasurer of Washington Permanent Building Association, and a member of the board of directors for the conference, will speak on "The Price of Savings Today." Senator James H. Hammond, South Carolina, is president of the conference.

Besides speakers from the Southeast, the meeting will present many others of national prominence in both the savings, building and loan field and the economic world in general. Titles of some of the talks include "Loans to Operative Builders;" "Creative Selling for Savings and Loan;" "Lending Policies;" "90 Per Cent Loans and the FHA;" "Advertising and Promotion." Election of officers and members of the board of directors to serve for the ensuing year will also be held.

The District of Columbia, with its 27 savings, building and loan associations having combined assets of $113,270,492, will be one of the most widely represented units at the conference. The District ranks high in volume of assets in the country, which has a total of $5,741,935,430 invested in such institutions.

Besides the District of Columbia, States to be represented at the meeting are those which are south of the Mason and Dixon line and the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi River, which, including Washington, D. C., total 13. There will also be representatives from States all over the country.

"The Southeast is rapidly coming to the fore in savings, building and loan national progress," said Senator Hammond. "This section of the country," he continued, "has made twice the stride of any other in the last five years in this field."

Burton Re-elected.

Re-election of Clarence F. Burton as president of the City Bank was announced following the annual meeting of that institution this week. Other officers elected were Frank W. Lee, Frederick H. Cox, Thomas P. Hickman and A. Scott Offutt, vice presidents; M. H. Buckingham, cashier; T. E. Elgin, B. M. Grant, William B. Mehler, jr., T. E. Norris and J. G. Stephenson, assistant cashiers.

John C. Pyles, sr., was elected an assistant cashier, succeeding H. E.

The Market

Stocks, Bonds and Commodities Rise Moderately With President's Message.

New York, April 14.—President Roosevelt proved to be all things to all markets, or very nearly so. His proposal to throw everything into the old well, including the pump handle, casing, Federal Reserve Board, three to seven billions of bank credit, monetary management, Secretary Morgenthau's epaulets and an odd assortment of former "objectives" stimulated the United States bond market into a rise of a quarter to half a point, brought a mild rally in stocks and lifted commodity prices.

Demand for bonds rose on the theory that smaller bank reserve requirements would force the banks to buy bonds to use their idle funds, while the hardening of stocks and commodities took place on the grounds that eventually the frenzy to halt the business depression through the use of inflationary stimulants might revive speculation. Last stock prices were generally higher. May wheat rose 2 cents to 84¾ cents a bushel. Cotton advanced a dollar a bale. On the other hand the dollar weakened against foreign currencies.

If it could be said that anything new developed to affect markets, aside from poor business statistics and particularly the unsatisfactory first quarter profits reports, it was the President's message to Congress on the necessity of pump-priming. That in turn contained nothing new except the amount of money which the President finally has decided will be the right amount to pour down the well. Trial balloons of four billions had been sent up at the same time the insiders were talking one and a half to two billions. The three billions now asked therefore comes as no surprise. What is a billion or two one way or another when the public debt is approximately forty-two billions? Anyhow another two billions also will be spent.

Putting Back.

In addition to the 3,000,000,000 pump-priming spending which the President proposed, he also went the whole hog in reneging on the rest of the pet deflationary schemes of the Secretary of the Treasury and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. At least on these two measures—namely, the desterilization of $1,400,000,000 of gold and the reduction in bank reserve requirements of $750,000,000—the Government proposes to act with a certain amount of logic in its putting the ship about on a new tack.

It was the decision to sterilize gold as a precaution against an inflationary boom and the further action in lifting bank reserve requirements that helped to break down the moderate business recovery of 1936 and the early part of 1937. In time these steps probably will work to loosen up the jam, but the dope takes effect slowly. Business has grown worse since the last two gold desterilization steps were taken.

Remember the Boom?

While proposing desterilization of gold and reduction of bank reserve requirements, the President was careful to avoid any hint that sterilization of gold and lifting reserve requirements in the first place had had anything to do with stopping business recovery. Quite the contrary. Instead he blamed business for stepping on its own heels in its rush toward better times. If, as the President says, it was fear of inflation, nationwide strikes and the like which brought about "overproduction," which in turn choked the recovery, certainly the Administration's inflationary policies and extraordinary aid given to labor unionization ought to be included in the picture.

So far as pump priming is concerned, it won't help business, but it will tend to increase the fear of business men that taxes will eventually destroy them. The President still seems to think he can lift himself by his own bootstraps, for in proposing to spend another three billions he says that as "citizen income rises Government expenditure will go down. Citizen income will rise only when citizen production increases, and that will come when the Government permits it to increase.

Investment.

The New Haven, in a supplemental report to SEC, states that its subsidiary, the Boston Railroad Holding Co. of New Haven, holds in its portfolio securities of Boston & Maine costing $34,701,653, which now have a market value of $3,635,138. Officers of the holding company perhaps felt that like the Delaware & Hudson, and the Chesapeake & Ohio, and the Pennsylvania, the New Haven was looking toward unification of railroads and seeking additional outlets of traffic.

Vote Yes or No.

The Stock Exchange management apparently wishes it to be understood that a plebiscite of the Hitler variety is to be held, under the guise of an election of a governing committee. Pains were taken to send round to the members of the exchange a resolution of the nominating committee that all members of the committee, including the old guard contingent, which failed to win, place or show in the selections, were going to vote for the nominees. Exchange officials hinted that the circulation of the resolution was intended as a warning to all and sundry who contemplated running independently—a natural right of any of the club members—that such action would not only constitute disloyalty, but wouldn't do any good anyhow. Around the board rooms much talk has been heard in the past day or two that a least two or three of the nominees, men who have been in the limelight as reformers, were quite displeasing to many members, and that they could be and probably would be beaten in the election by independent candidates. Some Wall Street people were unkind enough to suggest today that the committee's resolution was intended to frighten off independent candidates and thus insure the selection of the full slate as prepared (and approved by the SEC) by the insurgent members.

A SMALL ESTATE IN CHEVY CHASE, D. C.
$17,500.
Without fear of overstatement we advertise this home as having one of the most beautiful settings we have ever been able to offer. It is located midway between Conn. and Wis. aves. on a lot containing 21,732 square feet with frontage on three streets. In addition to seven dogwoods 15 to 18 feet high, the grounds are shaded by a group of towering black oaks, each with a magnificent spread of branches. There are at least $2,000 worth of shrubs, plants, walls and rock gardens on the property. We feel that the ground alone is worth the price asked, but in addition, there is a story and a half house containing living room, dining room, kitchen, large bedroom, bath and sleeping porch on the first floor, and 3 excellent rooms and bath and four really immense storage closets on the second floor. Recreation room and servants' quarters in basement, two-car garage and oil burner complete a most livable house. This is an exceptional opportunity. Inspection by appointment only.

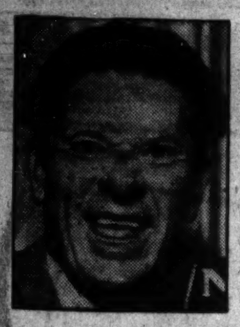
Bob Burns Says—



I never could see where folks got the idea that city people are smarter than farmers. Every time I read a story of some bunko racket it's about some city slicker that beats the so-called "yokel" out of somethin'. Maybe the reason you don't hear so much about the other side of the story is because the "yokel" is too slick to be found out.

I remember some city people useta drive out to my uncle's farm to get milk. One day when I was there, my uncle looked down the road and he hollered to my aunt and says, "Here comes them city people . . . hurry up and warm the milk up. You know they want it fresh from the cow."

5 Big Runways To Be Built at Capital Airport

Plans for a commercial airport with five runways longer than Department of Commerce minimum requirements were announced by the management of Washington Airport yesterday as President Roosevelt signed the Copeland bill closing Military road, one of the air terminal's principal hazards.

The new law will permit the National Airport Corporation to take over the roadway by paying the Arlington County Board $25,000 to build a substitute highway.

Provisions of Scheme.

Relocation of the Pennsylvania Railroad spur, and construction of runways from 4,535 to 5,380 feet long, are envisioned in the scheme for enlargement of the present air field made public by Samuel J. Solomon, airport manager. The Commerce Department requires runways to be no shorter than 4,000 feet.

Solomon at the same time made public a petition signed by 24 pilots of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines calling for development of a permanent air terminal at Washington Airport. The pilots said part of the Department of Agriculture Experimental Farm and the boundary channel should be included in the landing field.

Auxiliary Airport Urged.

Citing proposed removal of the Arlington radio towers, the pilots declared for removal of "all obstructions within the area" and recommended provision for an auxiliary airport "far out so as to be obstruction free . . . for landings and takeoffs under the worst weather conditions."

"To permit the maximum development of traffic, the auxiliary airport should be located on the same side of the river as the principal terminal," the petition said.

Row Near Conclusion.

President Roosevelt's approval of the Copeland bill brings nearer conclusion the controversy which has raged over the closing of Military road. At one time the Bureau of Air Commerce threatened to stop all commercial operations at the Washington Airport unless a safe method of traffic control were adopted. Automobiles, trucks and buses using Military road have been stopped by traffic lights installed by the airport whenever planes are landing or taking off.

Solomon was expected to confer with Arlington County officials to conclude the transaction for closing the road today or tomorrow.

James Howard Dies; Operator Of Hotel Chain

James T. Howard, operator of a chain of Washington hotels and a widely known yachtsman, died last night in Mt. Alto Hospital of pneumonia after a brain operation. He was 54 and lived at the Colonial Hotel, Fifteenth and M streets northwest, of which he was the owner.

Holding a record of combat service in the Philippines during the insurrection and in France during the World War, Mr. Howard was president and general manager of the Cairo, Plaza and Arlington hotels. The Arlington Hotel now houses the offices of the Rural Resettlement Administration.

Mr. Howard went to France with a unit of the Army ordinance department in 1917. He served overseas for two years and retired with the rank of captain.

A native of Durham, N. C., Mr. Howard came to Washington in 1907 and took a position with the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He entered the hotel business a few years later and before the war had become manager of the old Shoreham Hotel at Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

He was a director of the Washington Hotel Men's Association and a member of the American and District Bar Associations. He also belonged to the Almas Temple and the Second Division Post of the Legion.

In August, 1933, Mr. Howard's 50-foot cabin cruiser, Roja II, with Mr. Howard and a party of friends aboard, rescued a Philadelphia couple in a disabled catboat near Cape May, in Delaware Bay. The Roja maneuvered for two hours before the foundering craft was towed ashore.
